N-PLANT BLAMED FOR DEATH HIKE

OCEAN TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Infant mortality rates have increased by as much as 10 times and cancer rates 31 per cent since 1960 in communities surrounding a Pennsylvania nuclear power plant, a Pittsburgh University scientist says.

Dr. Ernest J. Sternglass, a professor of radiological physics, quoted the statistics Wednesday to a meeting of Ocean County residents opposed to the construction of a nuclear power plant at Forked River, N.J.

Sternglass said the figures were based on a two-year study by the Pennsylvania health department, which surveyed communities in the vicinity of the nuclear plant at Shippington, Pa.

The study indicated that infant mortality in nearby Midland Township had increased tenfold since the plant was constructed, Sternglass said.

The professor also said the figures showed that cancer cases in Beaver County, where the plant is located, increased 31 per cent in 1970 while increasing nine per cent in the rest of the state.

In addition, the ability of cows in the area to reproduce appeared to be affected and milk given by the cows contained increased levels of strontium-90, a byproduct of nuclear fission, Sternglass said.

Cold Wave Hits Crops

Times News Services

Freezing temperatures struck the southern U.S. today, causing widespread damage to fruit and vegetable crops and bringing predictions of higher prices.

Record April lows dipped into North Carolina and Florida only a day after intense cold damaged orchard and field crops from Southern Illinois to Arkansas and Alabama.

Alabama's peach crop was hard hit as the temperature skidded to 26 early today at Birmingham. Up to 75 per cent of the tomato crop in Arkansas may be wiped out, officials said.

Reports of freeze damage to Southern Illinois fruit crops, already hit by flooding, poured in Wednesday and experts said the cold snap had brought what appeared to be the biggest fruit kill since 1955.

"It looks like 95 per cent of the peaches are gone and from 50 to 75 per cent of the apples," said James West, a supply manager for the Illinois Fruit Growers' Exchange.

One peach grower said his crop was a 100 per cent loss — "We can't find one live bud."

The last hay drop operations in southwestern Colorado were completed in an effort to feed cattle stranded by heavy snow.

As temperatures moved into the 60s, burying cattle killed by severe weather became a top priority.

Damage estimates to cattle herds and new calves ranged up to $14 million in Colorado alone. As many as half the 48,000 calves born before the storm are thought to have died.

Meanwhile in Washington a newly-formed U.S. consumer group Wednesday laid plans for continued meat boycotts and a national day of protest against food prices next month.

The National Consumers Congress called for an indefinite halt to all meat buying and eating on Tuesdays and Thursdays and set May 5 as a national day of protest.

In Windsor, Ont., the U.S. group's Canadian counterpart, Citizens' Consumer Movement, also met Wednesday and decided to stage a mass demonstration against high food costs and a boycott of stores not co-operating in holding prices down.

In Toronto, the price of steaks and roasts dropped six cents a pound Wednesday in some supermarkets and ground beef went down five cents a pound to 89 cents.

Spokesmen for other food retailers downgraded the possibility of a meat price war but said they will be competitive.

TOP TORY QUITS

OTTAWA (CP) — Liam O'Brien, 44, national director of the Conservative Party since October, 1970, has resigned to take a position in his former firm, the Canada Trust Co.

He said the decision in no way reflected a poor party showing in recent opinion polls and that he would stay if a federal election was called in June.

Turner Sees 7% Growth

OTTAWA (CP) — Real growth in the economy is expected to hit seven per cent in 1973 and lead to a significant drop in unemployment, Finance Minister John Turner said in a general review of economic developments.

The review, tabled in the Commons, said measures in Mr. Turner's Feb. 19 budget will maintain upward economic momentum that has been apparent since September last year.

"Numbers employed are expected to increase by approximately 300,000 in the course of the year."

The 184-page document said a seven-per-cent real growth rate would be "clearly in excess of the potential growth rate of the economy and lead to a significant reduction in unemployment." Real growth is the measure of economic expansion with inflation factors stripped away.

"If real growth amounts to seven per cent, as now seems most likely, unemployment will decline, but the rate of its decline will depend upon the trend of participation rates and the readiness of people seeking work to accept jobs which are available.

"Prices in Canada will rise less than they would have done in the absence of the budget measures, but the upward trend in wholesale prices has not yet been fully reflected in consumer prices.

"The private sector's response to the budget measures in the setting of prices and the negotiation of wages will be a major factor influencing price developments in 1973."

The Magnificent 7

Times News Services

TORONTO — Seven pensioners, the youngest 64, beat back two armed robbers in a Washington hotel using a pole, a whisky bottle and a shoe.

Two of the Toronto holidayers narrowly escaped death from the gunmen's bullets. Two were treated at hospital and later released.

The elderly travellers and Gerry Small, 29, driver of the Trailways coach which had taken them on a weekend cherry blossom tour to Washington, were chatting in Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Wheeler's second-floor Holiday Inn hotel room when two gun-waving intruders burst in.

Margaret Fraser, 72, and Margaret Cosway, 67, were leaving the group. Mrs. Fraser was struck on the neck with a gun butt and thrown down the hallway. Mrs. Cosway was shoved back into the room and on to a chesterfield.

The thugs ordered everyone to lie on their stomachs. Only one obeyed — driver Small.

As one of the youthful gunmen pushed a .22-calibre revolver into Small's back and started searching him, John Baker, 69, picked up a shoe and knocked the gun from his hand.

The other gunman fired at Gordon Brown, 76, who collapsed from a heart attack — his eighth. The bullet lodged in a shoe belonging to Elsie Wheeler, 72.

She grabbed a hollow metal pole from a partition fixture and beat the gunmen's head and shoulders.

"I just went berserk," she said. "I later collapsed on my bed."

Husband Ernie Wheeler, 73, was advancing to get his share of the action when another shot rang out from five feet — missing him.

Baker then picked up a whisky bottle and ran after the retreating robbers.

The gunmen escaped with $480 from driver Small and $184 from Mrs. Cosway. As they left they pushed Edith Baker, 64, against a chair, inflicting deep bruises.

None of the travellers slept that night. Gordon Brown and Margaret Fraser were released after treatment in Washington's Providence Hospital.

Stewart Dow, a Trailways marketing officer who flew into Washington after hearing of the fracas, said Wednesday night the area in which the hotel was situated had deteriorated "far sooner than we thought it could" in the past six months.

He said that only seven or eight months ago, when last inspected, the hotel was in a highly-respected residential area.

"I was really surprised to see the change."

Japan Sticks to Deadline

Times News Services

Japan will not follow the U.S. lead in granting auto makers an extra year to meet 1975 pollution control standards, Japanese government officials said today.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday gave automobile makers an additional year to produce new cars meeting the 1975 standards for engine exhausts.

But Takeo Miki, director of Japan's Environmental Agency, said: "We are sticking to our fixed policy because of the serious environmental pollution in Japan."

In Washington, an Environmental Protection Agency official says EPA's little-noticed desertion of 1976 nitrogen-oxide limits in automobile exhausts is far more significant than its delay in forcing abatement of the two other pollutants.

If Congress accepts EPA's views, auto makers may have to provide little or no control of nitrogen oxide beyond that already applied to today's cars.

Meanwhile, government and industry sources say Californians will have to spend at least $200 more for their 1975 model cars because of the decision to impose interim state standards.

The catalytic devices required for most cars will have to be replaced after 25,000 miles of driving at a cost of between $50 and $75.

Cambodia Crisis Talks Held

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon called in his top military, diplomatic and intelligence advisers today for consultations on the worsening situation in Cambodia. Continued U.S. bombing there has caused growing congressional objections.

In Phnom Penh today a crisis atmosphere prevailed as more than 50 Western diplomats and their families left the capital in anticipation of an all-out attack on the city by Communist forces.

Members of the United States, Australian and British diplomatic community flew to Bangkok amid reports the attack may come within 24 hours.

OTHERS LEFT

The Japanese, Israeli and Soviet embassies carried out a similar evacuation earlier in the week in order to remove all dependents from Phnom Penh before the Buddhist New Year holiday Friday.

That is the date, military intelligence reports said, that Communist forces may hit the capital with a combined rocket and guerrilla attack.

Nixon made an early morning helicopter flight from Camp David to the White House to see his personal emissary to Cambodia and meet the National Security Council.

Gen. Alexander Haig, who made a four-day on-the-scene inspection for the president in Cambodia as well as visiting other key capitals in Southeast Asia, arrived back in Washington several hours before dawn and was on hand at the White House when Nixon returned.

HELP SOUGHT

Cambodia's President Lon Nol was reported Wednesday to have requested the help of South Vietnamese troops and planes to fight Communist forces which have taken over much of his country and threaten Phnom Penh.

A final decision on any plea for help in Cambodia was not likely before the return to Saigon of President Nguyen Van Thieu from his visit to the U.S. and five European and Asian countries. He is due back Saturday.

On Capitol Hill, Sen William Fulbright, (D—Ark.), condemned the U.S. bombing as based on specific legal arguments and likened the administration's justification of it to continued U.S. intervention in Vietnam after the Gulf of Tonkin resolution was repealed.

Some members of Congress have expressed growing concern that the bombing could lead to a new and deeper U.S. involvement in Indochina although it has pulled out of Vietnam. The administration contends that the Communist attacks in Cambodia are a violation of the Jan. 28 ceasefire.

Heavy combat raged on six major fronts within a 15-mile radius of Phnom Penh and all supply lines feeding the capital remain cut or imperiled by Communists almost encircling the city.

Despite 36 consecutive days of heavy U.S. bombing, with B-52 bombers and jet fighter-bomber strikes now averaging 220 a day, Communists have relinquished little territory and have choked off all but one of the five supply highways leading into the capital.

Slain Arabs Buried

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Palestinian guerrillas carrying submachineguns on their backs marched through the streets of Beirut today behind the coffins of their three leaders slain Tuesday by an Israeli assassination squad that struck into the heart of Beirut.

There were chants of "with blood we will revenge you" and a pledge by religious leaders that "we will carry the torch of the Palestinian revolution even into heaven." The sounds of rifle fire — a traditional Arab form of mourning — sounded from the rooftops.

There were massive anti-Israeli demonstrations with anti-American overtones in Damascus, Kuwait and Cairo.

Witnesses estimated the crowds lining the route to the cemetery numbered upwards of 50,000. The turnout of mourners was considerably short of Beirut press predictions, some of which ranged as high as 200,000. They had expected the demonstrations to be greater than those that came upon the death of Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser in 1970.

Guerrillas in cars and Land Rovers cut a wedge through the sea of people lining the three-mile route to the cemetery. A guerrilla band,

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials and Armand Hammer, chairman of the Occidental Petroleum Corp. of the United States signed an $8-billion chemical fertilizer contract today to be realized over the next 20 years, officials reported.

Goods Hoarded

TOKYO (Reuter) — Six of Japan's biggest trading companies were accused in parliament Wednesday of hoarding basic commodities and using their immense wealth to make huge profits through speculation.

Representatives of Mitsubishi, Mitsui, C. Itoh, Sumitomo, Marubeni and Nissho Iwai were questioned throughout the day by opposition members of a lower-house committee investigating price rises.

A trade ministry report last week accused the six companies of making huge profits from speculative trading in stocks, land, wool, cotton, silk, soybeans and timber.

Trade Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone warned the six the government would not tolerate such activities to the detriment of the people's welfare.

Several of the company presidents told their interrogators they are engaged in "self-reflection" about their activities and are drawing up criteria for future conduct of trading operations. But they denied hoarding to force up market prices.

GUERRILLAS DEMANDING $1.5 MILLION

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Argentine left-wing urban guerrillas demand a ransom equivalent to $1.5 million for kidnapped British businessman Francis Brimicombe, unofficial reports said today.

The reported ransom conditions are the same as those met by the Kodak Photographic Co. for Anthony da Cruz, an executive of the Argentine Kodak affiliate, released Saturday after five days in captivity.

New Breed of H-Addict Emerges

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Canada's almost-epidemic heroin problem now involves what the head of the federal health protection branch in Ottawa describes as a "different breed" of addict.

And the new breed of heroin addict is not only considerably younger and better educated than the stereotype "criminal heroin addict" of a few years ago, according to Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy health minister in charge of the HPD — the new addict seems, more importantly, to have lost "the fear of heroin."

Federal health authorities, as a result, are becoming increasingly concerned that the country's changing and rapidly-expanding heroin problem must be dealt with in a new and better way.

The latest heroin conviction statistics recently published by the bureau of dangerous drugs appears to support Morrison's comments. Heroin convictions during 1972 reached 923, up almost 85 per cent from the previous year's number. Alberta experienced the most significant jump, involving a 375 per cent increase compared to 1971, followed by similar large increases in Quebec and Saskatchewan.

B.C. remained the centre of the problem with 63 per cent of the convictions, followed by Ontario with 17 per cent and Alberta with almost 15 per cent.

More important perhaps, one-third of those convicted for heroin offences last year were between the ages of 21 and 24, according to the statistics. An additional 23 per cent were between 18 and 20 and another 19 per cent were between 25 and 29 years of age.

Morrison in an interview added that the statistics reveal that the new breed of young addicts tend to be multiple drug users, in contrast with the old-school addict who usually used only heroin.

In fact, there is considerable evidence that the young heroin users take heroin as a part of a much larger drug experimentation that involves "speed," cannabis and other hallucinogens such as LSD.

The bureau of dangerous drugs, in its latest statistics, estimates there are almost 9,000 "known" narcotic addicts in Canada, 86 per cent of them using principally heroin. This compares with the more realistic estimate, Morrison agrees, of the LeDain Commission that Canada has between 12,000 and 15,000 narcotic addicts.

Golf Course Resurrected

A nine-hole golf course, laid out more than 40 years ago and never used, could become a money-maker for Saanich parks department, indoor recreation chairman Ald. Fred Severson said Wednesday.

Severson said he intends to move that council make a par-three course at Beaver-Elk Lake to help defer costs at the regional park which Saanich maintains.

"Every year our costs are spiralling," Severson said, noting the 1973 budget estimate for Beaver-Elk maintenance is $56,000, up $10,000 since 1971.

"That piece of property (east of Beaver Lake) is not used and would take some of the pressure off Cedar Hill golf course," Severson said.

Vancouver makes good revenue from its nine-hole course in Stanley Park, Severson said, and according to the estimates this year, Saanich should clear $52,800 on the Cedar Hill course.

Beaver-Elk Park, with more than 400 land acres, originally was a watershed dating from 1878 and serving the city of Victoria for 40 years.

The city instructed the late golf course architect A. V. Macan to lay out an 18-hole course at the park in 1923 and construction started the same year on nine holes between what was then Beaver Lake and the road that became Patricia Bay Highway.

Lack of funds caused the project to collapse, according to a history of the park by Saanich parks administrator Bert Richman.

But the fairways, which were created from the brush and forest, may still be seen as clearings or meadows with hiking trails among them.

Victoria and Saanich operated the park jointly for 44 years and the Capital Regional District took ownership in 1967, leaving Saanich with a 10-year administrative role.

Severson envisages a small clubhouse with cashier, club rentals and concession, and one or two greenkeepers.

Golf professional Lawrie Carroll said Severson's idea was sound, although he guessed a $100,000 capital outlay would be needed to rehabilitate the old plan, make greens, install drainage and irrigation systems.

"Any golf course can make money as long as it is run properly," Carroll said.

Over a four- or five-year period, the lake course could be developed into a "very nice family" golf course, he said.

Richman said most of the area in which a course is proposed has been cleared, but a second plan drawn up by Macan about 1965 would alter the layout somewhat. At that time it was considered Saanich might assume ownership of Beaver-Elk.

The nine holes would total 3,220 yards, plus a practice driving area, and would not inerfere with roads, the highway or private property. One hole would be more than 500 yards, another more than 400, several in the 200-300 range and one 140 yards, and include a shot over water where the course touches the lake.

Richman thought development cost could be higher than $100,000.

Socreds Switch On Bill

The Social Credit opposition stood alone in the Legislature this morning to oppose the principal of legislation which would establish a B.C. Development Corporation for the promotion of secondary industry in the province.

Voting on second reading in the debate, adjourned from Wednesday night, produced a one-sided 39-9 result, with both the Liberals and Conservatives supporting the NDP government's legislation. An earlier amendment moved by the Socreds, to hold over the bill for six months, was defeated with the same majority. (See earlier story on Page 39.)

Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan), who said Wednesday night the Socreds would be supporting the bill, accused Premier Barrett this morning of "bludgeoning through legislation which is unknown to the people of the province."

'HAM-HANDED' THREATS

She said Barrett has made "ham-handed, immature threats" in saying the previous night that he would make sure the constituents of northern Socred MLAs are made aware of their opposition to the legislation.

To comments from the government benches that she had changed her tune overnight, Jordan said, "I fooled you, didn't I?"

Apparently referring to Socred inconsistency in the debate, Conservative House Leader Scott Wallace deplored "the flip-flop performance" put on by the official opposition.

"No wonder we politicians are in pretty low repute in the eyes of the public when the official opposition behaves in this irresponsible way," he said.

"Their performance had to be seen and heard to be believed."

Similar criticism came from Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey), who said Jordan's remarks deserved more pity than contempt.

He recalled that under the former Social Credit administration all three opposition parties had repeatedly asked for assistance to secondary industry, but the requests fell on "completely deaf ears for 20 years."

Gardom said while there were some individual concern with regard to the legislation, the over-all effect is certain to be beneficial.

MASTER PLAN

Jim Chabot (SC—Columbia River) said the legislation is "one segment in this government's master plan," to assume control over all aspects of society.

He said there has been no copper smelter constructed in the province because the government wants control over the smelter operations. The government has no right to "invade" any corporation which needs financial assistance.

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace) said the development corporation bill has to be studied in the light of other legislation introduced this session by the government.

POT PARTY POPPED IN SMOKE CLOUD

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Twenty-one youths were arrested Wednesday when a policeman noticed marijuana smoke "hanging over the neighborhood like a cloud" and followed his nose to a house where a party was in progress. "They were smoking it freely through the house," said patrolman Paul Harmes, who took part in the raid in suburban Montgomery.

"There was marijuana fudge in the oven. They were boiling marijuana on the stove in tea bags and they had some burning in the fireplace.

"It was going up the chimney and we could smell it all over the neighborhood," Harmes said.

U.S. Oil Shortage Could Bring War

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Americans may soon be confronted with the choice of accepting strict conservation measures on domestic oil production or sending an army to the Middle East to secure oil fields there, a federal official has warned.

Elmer Bennett, assistant director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, told an energy symposium Wednesday he hoped the American public would voluntarily adopt the use of lower horsepower engines and restraints on the use of other petroleum products, but he added:

"There are real doubts whether the American people are going to accept such changes in their lifestyle. . . .

"If our dependency on foreign oil becomes so great, or our control in foreign policy and international influence declines, we might someday see these measures adopted.

"The alternative would be to send an expeditionary force to the Middle East that would make Vietnam seem like a picnic."

At the United Nations Lebanon asked today for urgent meeting of the Security Council to discuss Israeli attack against targets in Beirut and Sidon. The session is expected to take place either later today or Friday following consultations among the members of the 15-nation Council.

Today's action followed a protest note which Lebanese Ambassador Edouard Ghorra delivered Tuesday night to Israeli Ambassador Perez de Cuellar charging Israel with a "blatant act of aggression."

Israel issued a counter-complaint saying Lebanon had allowed its territory to be used as "a haven for all terrorists."

Meanwhile, security forces began a widespread roundup of Arabs in Israel and Israeli-held territory whose names appear on Arab guerrilla lists captured in Tuesday's raid, a military source said today.

The source said "a few" men had been arrested, but the newspaper Maariv said the number was above 35 and rising. It added that the seizures may have headed off guerrilla attacks planned for Israel's 25th anniversary celebrations next month.

Maariv said the suspects' names appeared on lists taken from the home of Kamal Adwan, one of the three guerrilla leaders slain by Israeli raiders in Beirut.

"We hope and believe what we have done will save lives," an Israeli foreign ministry spokesman said of the raid. He added that not one note of diplomatic protest had been received.

Gilson' TILLERS

You duplicate nature's own method of building soil fertility with a Gilson tiller. Here's why: Gilson's perfect slicing and blending action mixes up soil and organic matter thoroughly . . . forms a loose, aerated seedbed. As a result, plant roots penetrate and reach out easily; moisture is absorbed more readily; decomposition of soil minerals and organic waste takes place quicker. Your garden gets off to a faster start and flowers and vegetables grow bigger than ever before. Gilson tillers feature extra heavy construction, guaranteed tines (replaced free if ever broken), cast iron gear case, adjustable tilling widths, 3½ to 8 hp. See us for a demonstration in your own garden.

Tube-Fed Seal Fighting for Life

A yearling elephant seal, one of a breed almost extinct by the end of the 19th century, is fighting for his life at Sealand in Oak Bay Marina.

Today, a special tube and pump arrived from Vancouver and an attempt to tube-feed him took place this afternoon.

Although only a yearling, he weighs 350 pounds and could if he survives to maturity, measure 22 feet and weigh up to 8,000 pounds, 3,000 more than Sealand's killer whale Haida.

Named Pablo (because he was rescued by a Sealand crew Sunday, the day Picasso died), the seal was first spotted Saturday, beached in a small cove at Becher Bay.

Maul marks near his head and the lower part of his powerful body indicate that it was some sort of vital encounter that drove him to seek shelter ashore.

Three killer whales were spotted in the area Saturday and it is believed they forced the wounded seal to shore.

Alerted by Mrs. Ruth Orchard, 4814 William Head Road, the Sealand crew rescued the bleeding seal, which is now under intensive isolated care.

Sealand curator John Colby is in charge of treating the seal, which, although young, is capable of smashing a man's arm.

If today's tube-feeding is successful, it will be the first time Pablo has eaten since he scurried to Becher Bay.

He has been given injections of glucose, vitamins and antibiotics and blood tests are encouraging—all they show is "some borderline dehydration" says Sealand veterinarian Dr. Alan Hoey.

On the advice of Dr. Jay Sweeney, veterinarian at the naval research centre in San Diego and other California experts, Pablo has been cajoled with the ratfish and dogfish his species enjoys. So far, he has refused to eat.

Colby says Sweeney informed him that the northern elephant seal, whose breeding grounds are off California and Mexico, is vulnerable to damage from ships and men.

"Dr. Sweeney told me they're quite prone to getting shot," Colby reports, "or damaged by collision with part of a vessel because they have no fear of man."

Gregarious on their breeding grounds, when the seals head north they make the migration alone.

Whalers hunted the elephant seals almost out of existence until a ban was laid down to protect the species.

They get their name from the peculiar proboscis they grow as they approach maturity.

The B.C. Fisheries Act lists them as a protected animal.

Sealand president Bob Wright has obtained special permission from the fisheries department for Pablo's mercy mission.

SAANICH COSTS DOWN IN SEWER ARBITRATION

Saanich protest over Macaulay Point sewer system costs have been vindicated in an arbitration report this week trimming annual payments by $31,100.

Saanich and Esquimalt initiated the arbitration procedure under terms of Capital Regional District letters patent enabling the core municipalities to embark on a four-year capital trunk sewer and outfall system.

Consultant engineer John Priestman last year was given the task of arbitrating the apportionment of $8.4 million between Saanich, Victoria, Esquimalt and other users and potential users of the system including Indian reserve, View Royal, national defence and other federal departments.

He re-totalled the amount at $6.5 million because he used figures valid to last October 31, while the regional district had projected costs to the end of the first phase of construction.

But Priestman encountered a difficult area straddling the Victoria-Saanich boundary and was unable to take accurate account of historic sewer installations for purposes of determining ownership and cost allocation.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said the report means a "significant" reduction in annual payments for Saanich.

"I'm quite satisfied and would expect council will be, too," Curtis said.

Total capital costs will be apportioned: $4.28 million to Saanich, $673,652 to Victoria, $637,417 to View Royal, $455,685 to Esquimalt, $238,975 to national defence, $164,569 to Indian lands and $55,369 to other federal lands.

Annual payments for Saanich will be $324,329, not counting the anticipated adjustment for the old trunk, which is expected to raise the payment to $457,041.

Oil Firm Angry

Imperial Oil Ltd. told the provincial government today that the Energy Act, through which the government proposes to regulate prices of petroleum products, is "inequitable," "inadequate," and could result in an investment boycott of oil companies in B.C.

The company presented a brief to the government in which it said the Energy Act, if enacted, "will be detrimental to the consumers and to the economy of B.C.,"

The Energy Act was given approval in principal in the legislature Wednesday (See Page 18). Committee-stage consideration will take place in the next few days.

The Imperial brief said energy resources in Canada and in the world have been "a tremendous bargain" and cost the average individual only about $1 per day for heating, lighting, transportation and appliances.

Competitive forces which exist in the petroleum industry "insure that the public interest is protected and that utility-type controls are not required and are counter to the public interest," the brief said.

The company argued that the Energy Act will "supplant" the body of law which exists in Canada for the effective functioning of competition and trade practices. And the act "fails to address itself to specific practices of the industry which are alleged to conflict with the interests of the consumer," it said.

The company recommended to the government that the Energy Act be referred to a committee of the legislature for further study. It said discussions should have been held with the petroleum industry in which the government could have set forth its concerns about problem areas.

The company brief said that the powers of entry, seizure and operation of assets contained in the legislation "are so stringent that anyone engaged in the petroleum industry in B.C. must carefully consider the wisdom of any further investment in the province which can possibly be avoided."

Gov't Mill 'Same Rights'

The proposed new crown corporation that will operate the government-owned pulp and paper operation at Ocean Falls will have the same rights and liability under law as any private company, according to amendments to the Ocean Falls Corporation Act introduced in the legislature today by Resources Minister Bob Williams.

The brief bill merely has the effect of removing crown immunity from the agency, in stating that it "may sue and be sued in its own name, and is liable at law" as if it were any private company.

Williams told reporters the provision was overlooked in first drafting the legislation. Under present B.C. law, a fiat or special permission from the cabinet is required before anyone can sue a government agency.

The City Itself

Mr. Tom Denny, the Victoria businessman who was a leading sponsor of the 700 Block Yates Street development and other imaginative projects, has done as much as any Victorian — and a good deal more than most — to promote a better environment in the city core. But in his motion adopted by the Central Business District Advisory Committee, to open up present building restrictions to permit much higher density in the central business area, he will run into predictable opposition from many sources.

Alderman Sam Bawlf, chairman of the city land-use planning committee, is the first to come out with a counter-opinion, and it seems to be more in tune with the popular concept of Victoria's development than do the ideas of the highrise proponents. The crux of the matter is that the existing restriction on structures in the commercial zone sets a three-to-one ratio — that is, the total area of floor space cannot be more than three times the area of the site. Under this rule, a building that covers the whole land area can have no more than three full storeys. If it covered half the lot, it could have six. Setbacks would permit greater heights because of the smaller floors.

The Central Business District Advisory Committee, on the basis of its endorsation of Mr. Denny's motion, would favor a seven or even 10-to-one ratio, permitting correspondingly higher buildings. This is necessary, it is argued, to permit developers to build economically feasible structures.

Whether the economically feasible structure is also socially feasible raises other important questions. These are questions that vitally affect Victoria's future, and the basic problem of what we want the city to be. The Wall Street canyon type of environment is an extreme form of freedom in building to heights apparently governed only by engineering skill. Vancouver, with an eight-to-one ratio of density, presents an increasingly alarming picture of what super-development can produce. It's possible, but is it desirable?

For Victoria, the answer must be "no." What makes the city such a fine place in which to live, and such an attractive place to visit, would disappear in a forest of high buildings in the relatively small area of the business core. If we think we have traffic problems now, what would they be in streets lined with buildings with three times the density of office workers or residents? What problems of parking, rush-hour congestion and pedestrian crowding would ensue from markedly higher density?

Alderman Bawlf raises considerations of a similar nature. Quite apart from the appearance of a high density core area, he asks if the economics are acceptable. "It's folly," he says, "to concentrate all new development in one new tower and sap development from the rest of the town. It's much wiser to distribute it across the main axis routes."

What is really at stake is the fundamental nature of Victoria. We had better decide what we want to do about that, lest we find that indecision and changeable policies have produced an erosion of character from which we could not recover.

Splinters on the Regional Board

The Municipal Act amendment aimed at giving voters a direct choice in selecting municipal members of regional boards appears as an effort by the government to meet public wishes — and implement NDP election promises — without imposing a two-tiered administration on municipalities.

Candidates for mayor or aldermen could, under the new provisions, stand also for election to regional board directorships. The candidate elected to council who received the highest number of votes for the post of regional director would take both seats. But his or her election to the regional board would depend first on election to the council. This would replace the present method of mayors appointing themselves and aldermen as regional board directors.

As a rule, the new plan would probably work. Inherent in it, however, are several flaws. A candidate for council or for mayor might not choose to stand for the regional board, considering his other duties as much as he could handle. If elected he could deprive a regional board candidate he defeated of municipal status. Or a candidate seeking both offices might head the poll in the regional board directors' contest but fail to be elected to the council, thereby losing the essential qualification.

The arrangement seems loose enough to permit an elected alderman or mayor to assume a regional board directorship although he might be well down the list of candidates for that seat.

The anomaly might be avoided if election of regional directors were separated from council contests as in former police commission polling, when commissioners stood for the one office only; or if regional directors were chosen by the voters as school trustees are in this district. Through such a system, regional board directors would be the direct choice of the voters under conventional polling rules, and nothing need stop an aldermanic or mayoralty aspirant from entering both contests.

What is important is that members of a regional district board should represent the region as a whole and make their decisions on that basis, rather than carry municipal interests into the board's meetings with a consequent tendency to decide regional questions on a parochial basis.

The U.S. Grew Up in Vietnam

SAIGON — On July 19, 1941 Admiral Leahy, Ambassador to Vichy, France, transmitted this message from President Roosevelt: "If Japan was the winner (in World War II), the Japanese would take over French Indochina; and if the Allies won, we would." In that psychology lay the root of future trouble.

I have been visiting this tormented country intermittently for almost a quarter century and all the time it was suffering violence. In the early 1950s, when Viet Minh mortars thudded each evening along the Saigon River and German was spoken in Tourane, now Danang, by ex-Nazi recruits of France's Foreign Legion, war was already an established habit.

The French quit after Dienbienphu and the United States moved in, spending $140 billion in a gradually increasing effort to protect what was left after the Geneva partition. And now, with the Americans gone, Vietnam is in a period of neither war nor peace. What has been learned from this expensive effort?

Strategy Reformed

President Marcos of the Philippines assays Vietnam accordingly: "Had the principles of self-determination and decolonialization been observed by France and the United States, there would have been no war. Now the U.S.A. and the world have re-learned this lesson.

"It has been shown to be unprofitable to fight ideological wars. One also sees it is more practical to fight exported wars by proxy. Finally, the whole world gained time; but no one knows if this time has been used to advantage."

The 1954 partition, arranged as a temporary device and reaffirmed by this war's cease-fire, theoretically remains in effect. With South Vietnam's integrity officially guaranteed, President Nixon could withdraw American forces and claim peace "with honor" — which would be true if South Vietnam could assert its independence henceforth. To be or not to be, that is the question.

There is no compelling arguments against partition. During the 17th and 18th centuries Vietnam was divided along almost the same frontier. American intentions in going to war were honorable even if the drift into widening conflict was unforeseen.

President Thieu is politically strong today and could surely win an election. His opponents therefore wish to delay its prospect. The latest agrarian and tax reforms constitute a revolution for Vietnam and Thieu is gaining in rural areas. The Viet Cong is weak. There would be no problem without the redoubtable

PRESIDENT MARCOS
. . . sums it up

North Vietnamese army — which Hanoi blandly insists never fought here.

But the war was surely not won. In 1967 Ambassador Bunker recommended a thrust into southern Laos cutting off the Ho Chi Minh Trail so Communist forces to the south would wither away. Washington vetoed the idea as violating the Geneva accord (which Hanoi constantly violated); as a provocation of China (which wasn't threatened); and as requiring more U.S. divisions (which came later anyway).

America never fought to win. Nor did it make adequate efforts to engage the U.S. people in a sense of participation. The burden fell unfairly on the young who didn't understand its background and whose views spread widely.

At the start the Americans were too know-it-all while their enemy was tough and idealistic. Saigon was never fully engaged; there wasn't even a mobilization law until 1968. While young Americans fought, young South Vietnamese were exempted. Vietnamization began too late.

Washington, furthermore, believed it could apply pressure, then break off and expect concessions. Time and again it was fooled until the unexpected Nixon toughness, which produced the chance of settlement, if not its actuality, and a way out for Americans.

Thieu has done foolish, vindictive things. But it is silly to equate his semi-dictatorship with Hanoi's totalitarian system. The army is still riddled with influence-promotions but it is better than it ever was.

South Vietnam is dependent upon American logistics and maintenance for its aircraft, helicopters and armor. But if the United States continues to supply this force, Saigon seems unlikely to succumb.

Lesson Re-Learned

Ideologically, the United States has grown up in Vietnam and now sees that Communism is not a Manichean evil automatically to be opposed and that represented democracy isn't always a realistic export. American strategy has been reformed. It is hard to imagine another ground war in Asia involving U.S. troops.

We have learned to mind our business better, but our adversaries have also learned not to trick us, as Hanoi found out by unexpected bombings. Moreover, Moscow and Peking have become mutually even more hostile. This then, in the moment's relative quiet — and what is tranquil in Vietnam is noisy elsewhere — is the war that was.

MAURICE WESTERN

Do-It-Yourself in the North

OTTAWA — The lot of the regulator is not necessarily a happy one, as shown by the current plight of Pierre Juneau and his fellow sages of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission. How are regulations to be reconciled with the public notions of natural justice in the case of the enterprising viewers of Ross River?

While there has been a fair amount of comment on the somewhat irregular proceedings of citizens in the Yukon community, much of it has glossed over two very difficult problems. If northerners were merely disadvantaged in comparison with other Canadians, it would be very regrettable. The matter, however, is much worse for they have been victims of taxation without reception. Many of them for many years have been taxed, no less than other Canadians, for services they did not get.

Fortune's Darlings

According to the latest Blue Book, taxpayers north and south will be required this year to support the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation with $232,797,000 in operating subsidies and $34,427,000 in "loans" for capital expenditures. Within government the term "loan" has a somewhat unusual meaning; in this case, obviously, it can be repaid only by those who provide it: that is to say by the patriotic taxpayers, including those of Ross River.

The same citizens will also have the privilege of providing some $6,200,000 for the CRTC which supervises the CBC and other networks. In addition, we have a very large investment — some $90 million in fact — in Anik which is supposed to ensure, among other results, that people in communities such as Ross River receive these indispensable services.

It now appears that, in spite of the edicts of the CRTC in both official languages, in spite of the efforts of the CBC as mentioned in annual reports, and in spite of the scientific miracles ordered by government, the citizens of Ross River have been unable, by approved means, to receive the services for which they pay. Owing to a pair of misplaced mountains, the televised signals directed towards them by a CBC repeater at Faro are diverted elsewhere into the great beyond.

On the evidence of various ill-tempered letters to editors, there are apparently people in southern Canada who feel that the disadvantaged residents of Ross River are more to be envied than pitied. Well-adjusted persons in greater harmony with the official outlook will realize instinctively that such attitudes are wrong and ought to be deplored. For the CBC is no ordinary network; it has been given a mandate by the Government and Parliament.

To state the matter in general terms,

GERARD PELLETIER

its mission is to keep us culturally pure and to guard our fragile nationalism against dangerous foreign thoughts and airwaves.

It is heartening that the pioneer people of Ross River were not prepared to stand idly by while they and their children were cut off indefinitely in prime television hours from the CBC's life-giving flow of enlightenment, violence, mayhem, soap, social criticism and stirring tales from our national capital. Nor could they suffer the best efforts of the CRTC, the CBC and the wizards of satellite communications to be frustrated by the unco-operative Yukon terrain.

Experience has shown that vexing local problems of this sort are not always adequately grasped by high officials moving in refined Ottawa circles. It is not altogether surprising therefore that the leaders of the Ross River community received inadequate encouragement when they discussed their do-it-yourself project with federal people.

The response apparently was that, in such matters, even experimentation is forbidden and that licensing, apart from the expense involved, could impose a delay of as much as nine months.

It is quite possible for the moral fibre of a community to be impaired in a much shorter time.

Mr. Juneau and his colleagues will doubtless realize that the situation at Ross River is out of the ordinary. Thus, in parts of the south, the problem is to induce persons enjoying a choice to adjust their dials to approved CBC channels. The merit of the Ross River residents is that they chose deliberately (this, of course, being the sole option) to bring the CBC into their living rooms.

One can understand the applause on Tuesday—most of it from benches to the left of Mr. Speaker — when Gerard Pelletier, the Minister of Communications, was invited by Donald MacInnis to send a message of congratulations to Ross River.

Local Triumph

For the fact is that the citizens, undeterred by regulations and difficulties, did succeed in linking themselves with the nation, the Minister, the CBC and the CRTC by constructing their own television receiving station on a local mountain top. With their assistance, the CBC is at last in a position to do what it could not do before, even with heavy subsidies and the Anik satellite. After all these years it can service people who have always paid for it in any case with its miscellaneous treasures of Canadian and imported content.

There is, of course, a legal difficulty. On the narrow view, the CBC is in a sense being bootlegged into Ross River. It would seem utterly ridiculous, however, for the CRTC to permit a regulation, or even several, to stand in the way of culture, national unity, lectures on ecology, and the voices of CBC news personnel reporting in respectful tones the latest word from our political and bureaucratic governors in Ottawa.

Such an attitude would never be understood by the enterprising folk of Ross River. In addition, it might arouse unseemly hilarity elsewhere in the country. The CRTC will doubtless realize, on reflection, that a most worthwhile work has been accomplished by Yukon residents inspired by patriotism, concern for deprived children and the pioneering spirit of the True North strong and free.

Editorial Correspondence

Ombudspeople

The expansion and increasing complexity of government, at all levels, means that the average citizen is spending too much time trying to find answers to problems. Too often the problem falls between two or more departments, or between different levels of government and no one will take the responsibility to help correct it.

Instead of one ombudsperson, we need several. I suggest one for City Hall, another for Vancouver Island and three or four more, each being responsible for a group of ministries in the provincial government.

This group of ombudspersons should work together to get things done quickly, cutting across red-tape and insisting that someone, in government, become responsible for solving a problem which, in general, was not the citizen's fault in the first place. — Mrs. Kay Lines, 27 South Turner.

Demonstration

I should like to inform your readers that on Sunday, March 25, the Society for the Protection of Unborn Children staged a massive, anti-abortion demonstration in Manchester, England, in which 60,000 — some claimed nearer 100,000 — took part. It is reported that thousands of people travelled from Scotland and the south of England in order to express their feelings on this matter. This was the second demonstration organized by the society; the first was held in Liverpool last May.

Members of the Manchester University Union supported the demonstration and Mr. Leo Abse, MP for Pontypool, and Mr. Malcolm Muggeridge, the well-known journalist and television celebrity, were among the speakers. Mr. Muggeridge said, "I would like to think that if I were the only man left in the world who believed in the cause that has brought us together here, I should still find it worthwhile to stand up and denounce . . . those who see our generation as just a productive process, to be fostered or abated like any other — poultry or pigs or mangelwurzels — in accordance with our material circumstances . . . I can see it all, broiler houses in chromium and glass, climbing into the sky for men, not fowl; computers working out our mortal destiny as beautifully as they do the census, or the trade returns."

The strong public support for the Manchester demonstration is particularly encouraging to members of the local group, "Voice for Life," and possibly to others who are very much concerned about this vital issue. — (Mrs.) D. Etheridge, 3901 Oakdale Place.

From The Times of April 12, 1913:

LONDON — Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, was released from Holloway jail today after being on a hunger strike since she was sentenced nine days ago to three years of penal servitude. Mrs. Pankhurst was released on probation, under the terms of which she must report at frequent intervals to the police. If she commits a misdemeanor she will be liable to instant arrest and must then serve out her full term. The intention of the authorities is to allow her to be free only until she regains her strength.

The Billion-Dollar Military Hardware

By SIMON WINCHESTER
Manchester Guardian

WASHINGTON — Elliot Richardson, the lean, ascetic lawyer who has replaced Melvin Laird as American secretary of defence, went up recently to Capitol Hill to present his first so-called "defence posture" statement to interested congressmen.

The Senate Armed Services Committee learned from Richardson the details of America's military needs for the immediate post - Vietnam years: they heard too, deftly interwoven into the fabric of his statement, the defence chief's request for yet more money to finance the two most expensive single pieces of defence hardware ever made by any country in the history of the world.

Each piece of equipment, one a nuclear aircraft carrier, the other a missile-firing submarine, will cost the American taxpayer a sum of money that once belonged only in the realms of fiscal fantasy — one billion dollars. And although most of the necessary money has already been voted, and the huge machines are about ready to be built at shipyards in Virginia and Connecticut, there are still some standing up to ask the simple question — are any weapons worth one billion dollars each?

Neither machine has, as yet, a name. The 90,000-ton carrier, due to be built at the biggest slipway in Newport News next year, is still content to answer to her Pentagon title, CVAN-70; in fact she will probably be called the USS Harry S. Truman or the Lyndon Baines Johnson, in line with America's curiously transsexual attitude towards ship nomenclature. The submarine, to be built at Groton on Long Island sound, was first known by the inelegant acronym UL-MS; now she is called after the missile she will fire — Trident. There will be 10 Trident subs, costing a total of $13 billion.

The controversy over the carrier has been rumbling the longest. So far the United States has one nuclear attack carrier, the Enterprise, which entered service in 1961. The country's total attack carrier force is set at 15, of which the oldest, a creaking antique named the USS Hancock, dates back to the middle of the Second World War.

Five years ago, the then defence chief, Robert McNamara, won permission from Congress to build the first of a trio of giant nuclear powered attack carriers. The first of these, the Nimitz, is due to go into sevice later this year; CVAN-69, the Eisenhower, should be commissioned by autumn next year; the third, our CVAN-70, is due in the navy's hands by summer 1977. Enterprise was partly, of course, an experiment in nuclear warship technology, and her cost — then staggeringly high, at $451 million — may have been justifiable for pioneering reasons.

Thanks to inflation and increased reactor costs (though there are in fact six fewer reactors in the new fleet) the price of Nimitz was $536 million, and Eisenhower, which enjoyed some of the economies of scale, notched up another $510 million. CVAN-70 is almost identical in size, performance, and weapon load, yet the cost of putting her on station is more than double the billion dollars mentioned in this year's budget.

It is this factor, combined with nagging doubts about the future use of carriers as a type, that has got congressmen and senators so concerned.

When on station, the CVAN-70 will need to be accompanied for a start by no less than four destroyer escorts (worker bees to the carrier's Queen) of which at least two, and probably all four, will be nuclear - powered to enable them to keep up with, and travel as far as, the big ship. The four, each specially designed and equipped, will cost a total of $570 million. Though the Pentagon will never admit it, each carrier has to be given submarine escorts, adding hundreds of millions of dollars more to the bill. The planes which CVAN-70 will carry — 24 F-14 fighters, 36 attack aircraft, four tankers, three reconnaissance planes, four early warning spotters, four electronic spy planes, 10 anti-submarine aircraft, and an octet of helicopters — will cost an estimated $621 million.

The arsenal of complex and super deadly ammunition (including the six missiles carried by the F-14 that must be jettisoned, at $400,000 a throw, each time one lands on deck) add hundreds of millions more, so the final price of a patrolling carrier like CVAN-70, according to the more parsimonious congressmen, like Wisconsin's Les Aspin, may be as much as five billion dollars. An independent survey by the centre for defence information here puts the cost at $2.15 billion — still a disturbing figure, and one which, of course, makes no provision for running costs, spares, new fuel or overhauls.

What then are the taxpayers getting for their huge investment — from which, naturally enough, the shipbuilders and the myriads of subcontractors are going to win huge profits? What does America get from it all?

The entire rationale behind America's decision to build a grand fleet of attack carriers was so that she could gain control of the seas and the associated airspace. With CVAN-70, which has fighter-bombers that can range up to 600 miles from the angled deck, America wins what she calls "undisputed" control of about one million square miles of ocean; that means that areas like the entire Bay of Bengal, the Arabian Sea, or the South China Sea, or the Mediterranean can be happily covered by one such vessel.

Russia has only just started to ape the United States; after much thought the Russian navy has recently started to build two smallish, conventionally powered carriers in the Black Sea yards. One should be on duty late next year.

All in all the United States should hold sway over 15 million square miles of ocean — less than a quarter of the entire Pacific Ocean, but sufficient, her admirals feel, to protect her trade and her lifelines from political ligature.

A secondary reason for building such huge ships is to give, as in Vietnam, a powerful support base for a land war. The nuclear carrier can stay at sea for a year or longer without a crew change, could remain on station almost indefinitely, and so long as her worker-fleet continues to supply her with life-giving and death-giving materials she could keep up a barrage against an enemy for as long as her captain or her commander-in-chief may desire.

But equally, her critics say, a carrier is a frightfully vulnerable piece of hardware. An airbase on land — which has the advantage over the carrier of being available for strategic strikes, and not as purely a tactical base — can usually be repaired or rebuilt after a successful non-nuclear strike.

A carrier though, which is vulnerable to submarine-launched cruise missiles, to coastal gunfire, the other ships, and even to ICBMs — though the Pentagon doubts that the Soviets have the technology to hit a moving carrier as yet — has an unpleasant and somewhat final tendency to sink. Admiral Elmo Zumwalt, the chief protagonist of the carrier philosophy at the Pentagon, points out that not one American carrier has been lost since the Second World War.

But at a billion dollars a time, and with Soviet technology improving all the time, it seems to some congressmen a somewhat costly arrogance to risk a first time.

Russia's reluctance to build such large ships and her continued reliance on the nuclear submarine as the backbone of her naval power have also been a stimulant to the anti-carrier league in America; a significant quarter of defence experts believe that the day of the massive carrier is passing and that the day of spending a billion dollars a ship should never have been reached.

But the need for full employment in the defence industries — at Newport News, at the Westinghouse plants, and at the hundreds of small firms who are building components for the giant — has produced intolerably seductive pressures for American congressmen. The power of the military-defence machine is such that, whatever the military arguments and whatever the cost, the CVAN-70 will almost certainly be built. It is part of the nonsense of a highly defence-oriented industrial society that citizens have to foot huge bills just to keep themselves in work.

Sailing On a Sea Of Plastic

SATURDAY REVIEW

Last summer a group of scientists fro Scripps Institution of Oceanography found themselves in the North Pacific, some 600 miles from the nearest civilized port. In a little more than eight hours, they saw some 53 man-made objects float by their ship, more than half of which were plastic bottles.

By calculating the distance at which they could identify flotsam and by working in the speed of the ship, the size of the oceans of the world, and various other mathematical parameters, they sat down and came up with the total number of plastic bottles adrift in the North Pacific: somewhere between 5 million and 35 million.

Endangering Fish

Now, that figure represents just plastic bottles. It doesn't include oil lumps, bits of rubber, light bulbs, or broken styrofoam. Writing in Nature, the scientists insist that "unless we find adequate means of disposing of our plastic products, we can anticipate that . . . our children will set sail into a plastic sea, accompanied by all the no-deposit, no-return products of our technology."

The "no-return" part may be too optimistic; Woods Hole biologists found last fall that some plastic—tiny polystyrene balls released as waste in southern New England — was endangering flounder, perch, and other ocean fishes that were eating it.

The recent bottle calculation somewhat parallels a similar exercise in which another group at Woods Hole figured out that most of the oil afloat on the oceans of the world was dumped there by operation of the world oil industry, not by natural undersea leaks, as that industry claimed. Of course, in the case of plastic bottles, there's no possibility of natural occurrence. Perhaps we can take meager solace in the fact that the more than five million bottles afloat represent only one-thousandth of the five billion or so made annually.

The Wrong Time to Push Bilingualism

By PETER DESBARATS

OTTAWA — "I believe the essential ingredient of politics is timing," said Prime Minister Trudeau in a radio interview last year, "and you don't determine your timing — it's events that determine it for you."

Perhaps the prime minister should call up that tape and listen to his own advice as he prepares to ram the language issue through this session of Parliament.

There are many signs that this is the wrong time for a heated and partisan national debate on the issue that almost tore Canada apart in the last decade.

Nobody Wants It

English-speaking Canadians don't want it. As usual, Quebec has shown little interest in it. Under these circumstances, and considering the limited but measurable progress toward bilingualism that has been made in the past 10 years, the results of a forced debate on the question at this time could well be more destructive than positive.

If this is the outcome, it could strengthen the impression among Canadians that the prime minister who brought them closer together in the sixties has failed to keep in touch with the national preoccupation of the seventies.

The prime minister himself at times has shown an awareness of changes in national priorities since he arrived in Ottawa in 1965, at the height of the "quiet revolution" in Quebec. Only a few days before the October election, during a converstaion aboard his campaign aircraft, he talked about moving into new policy areas during the next four years — policies affecting energy, industrial development and foreign investment.

"There are new questions," he said, "and if we leave them unanswered, they will recreate in 1976 the kind of doubts that existed in 1968.

"In other words, we've sold the old doubts just at the point where other doubts are emerging.

"In 1976, if we're still around, we'll be saying: 'In 1972, we had solved the crisis of identity, but we hadn't really shown how we would bring this identity into the future, and here's what we've been doing about it'."

The election result, of course, badly shook Trudeau's confidence in his success in resolving the doubts of the sixties. His closest cabinet colleagues from Quebec were also thrown into a prolonged period of depression as a result of the "rejection" of their policies by many English-speaking voters. During this period they agreed to substantial modifications in the program to promote bilingualism in the federal civil service.

Ever since then, the prime minister has shown an unbending determination to bring about some sort of national rededication to the objectives of bilingualism that were accepted by Parliament and by a majority of Candians during his first four years in office.

The strength of the prime minister's personal feeling about this has been evident in Parliament and in many interviews since the election. At times, the force of his own commitment has created inconsistencies in his approach.

'Settle in Commons'

In a conversation with me last Feb. 27, for instance, he explained his insistence on bringing the implementation of the Official Languages Act before Parliament in these words: "I want very much every member of Parliament to have to go on record in support of the application of the act. If a dissolution were to come before that, I'm afraid that the subject would look large during an election, and perhaps that wouldn't be a good thing in terms of divisiveness, and so on.

"I'd rather have it settled in Parliament than risk having it come up during an election in an underground way, as it did in the last election."

But only a day later, in a French-language television interview with Quebec journalist Solange Chaput-Rolland, he said:

"The struggle for the recognition of the 'French fact' from sea to sea is not over, the battle is not won, and I propose to make certain that the question is well debated in the next election."

Many Canadians, including this one, agree with the prime minister's objective. My own feelings place me in sympathy with those members of the government caucus, particularly the newer ones, who have been shocked to discover the almost complete predominance of English as the working language of Canada's national administration in Ottawa, and who think that the government should be blamed for not promoting bilingualism more effectively.

If progress has been slow since the early sixties, this has been not only because of the resistance of English-speaking civil servants. The program has been hindered by false starts on teaching methods, bad administration and an early failure on the part of the government itself to recognize the magnitude and difficulty of the task.

My own criticism of the prime minister's current course arises from my reading of sentiment on the language question in English-speaking Canada.

A few weeks ago, I spent four days with Health Minister Marc Lalonde in Alberta and Manitoba. Not once did anyone ask him in public about Quebec or bilingualism. In the sixties, regardless of his portfolio, a minister from Quebec would have been bombarded with questions and arguments on these subjects.

In English-speaking Canada, political interest now focuses on economic development and related questions about the roles of provinces and regions in national decision-making. The Official Languages Act is history. Many people still aren't enthusiastic about it but they have accepted it. The job of the government is to get on with it as efficiently as possible.

Strains in Caucus

The strains that are evident now in the Liberal caucus on the language question should serve as a warning for the prime minister. From all reports, positions have hardened since the election. Some of the Quebec MPs are pressing the prime minister to move more quickly on bilingualism while important western MPs have gone so far as to question the main thrust of the government's whole language program.

At the same time, some members of the Conservative caucus now are predicting that their group will take a unified and positive stand on the language question when it comes before Parliament. If the Conservatives can bring this off, the raising of the language question at this time could backfire on the Liberals.

After the October election produced a minority government, there were many who wondered if Prime Minister Trudeau would develop abilities that Mackenzie King and other Canadian national leaders found so necessary — abilities, as they have been described, to "balance one pressure group against another . . . to prevent issues becoming so clearly defined that they cause deep divisions."

In forcing the language question before his own caucus and Parliament, Prime Minister Trudeau may be permitting personal conviction to violate his own maxims about political timing, and to weaken his position as a symbol of consensus on important national questions.

Up the Riviere Horse

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

Most Canadians now either agree with, or are resigned to, the policy that requires official documents to be translated into French before release. This often causes delays in which reports lose much of their urgency, and sometimes even their value, but it is part of the Canadian scene and is accepted as such, including by me.

However, if you ever are seeking a case of bilingualism gone mad, stop in at any Information Canada office and pick up, at no charge, a map called Canada Carte Routiere, et nord des Etats-Unis. It's a route map of Canada and the northern United States put out by the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, part of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce. From Ile Vancouver to Ile de Terre-Neuve, as the song goes, there is a certain amount of fun to be had with this monument to our prineipal national confusion.

At some point, I guess, some federal mapmaker must have said, "Hey, Joe! Do we translate everything into French, every little town?" And Joe, blanching, replies, "Hell no — then we'd have to do an all-English one with a lot of names in Quebec like Three Pistols and Three Rivers and Rat River and Grandmother and Saint Henry."

However, what happened — and appears on the map — is a little bit of both. A gold mine of coin-flip decisions.

On the west coast, Prince William Sound becomes Baie Prince-Guillaume. Not a sound at all any more, but a bay. However, on the east Long Island Sound becomes Detroit de Long Island: half French, half English — and can't detroit also mean a strait, a pass, a defile?

In the Northwest Territories Great Slave Lake becomes Grand Lac des Esclaves and Great Bear Lake is Grand lac de l'Ours — but Trout Lake remains Lac Trout, not Lac Truite. And how about in Alberta, Parc Provincial The Dinosaur? While Horse River becomes Riviere Horse and not Riviere Cheval.

In Saskatchewan they couldn't do much with Lac Diefenbaker, but Reindeer Lake comes out as Lac Caribou even though a reindeer is La Renne (isn't it?) and a caribou is a caribou. Anyway, the river that flows into it is still Riviere Reindeer. (I imagine somebody must have stared hard at Fort-Qu-Appelle, and imagined the comparable English-map version: Fort Who Calls?)

Cree Lake becomes Lac des Cris but Black Bear Island Lake — it's just too damn complicated, guy — remains as Lac Black Bear Island. Grand lac Muddy is a similar bilingual copout, as is Lac Old Wives, although Quill Lake is shown as Grand lac a la Plume.

In Manitoba Swan Lake and Swan River become Lac Cygne and Riviere du Cygne. But if we gotta have cygnes, what happened to the canard at Duck Mountain Provincial Park? It is Parc Provincial Mont-Duck. Spruce Woods Forest Reserve equals Reserve Forestiere du Spruce Woods. It's Riviere Rouge in Manitoba but Lac Red in Ontario.

While most city and town names are left alone, there is some dabbling at translation in the Maritimes. Like good old Saint-Jean, New Brunswick. And I don't know how the Newfoundlanders qualified to have their capital, St. John's, changed to St.-Jean, which just isn't quite the same.

Maps are very expensive things to produce. Maybe somebody should find out what all this nonsense cost. But there's not much use taking the challenge all the way to the minister of the time, Jean-Luc Pepin. He's gone; tres occupe maintenant avec other things than government.

Agra

Agra Industries Ltd. has agreed to acquire all the outstanding shares of Valley Televue Ltd. of Chilliwack. The purchase, subject to approval of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, involves an exchange of cash, shares and notes. The purchase price was not disclosed.

Valley Televue operates a cable television system in the Chilliwack area. Agra Industries, in addition to communications, has holdings in the engineering, food and beverage industries.

Gregory

Gregory Industries Ltd. reports record sales volume and net earnings for 1972.

Sales were $7,370,800 in 1972, compared with $5,711,102 in 1971. Net earnings were $271,980 or 29 cents a share, compared with $205,350 or 24 cents a share, on fewer shares.

The company produced 70,833,000 board feet of lumber in 1972 compared with 70,204,000 in 1971.

Celanese

The president of Celanese Corp. says the sale of its subsidiary Columbia Cellulose Co. Ltd. to the British Columbia government "has completed five years of difficult but necessary restructuring of the corporation."

John W. Brooks told shareholders at the company's annual meeting he did not anticipate the sale would require any additional write-offs and that any favorable adjustments would be determined only after completion of the divestment.

Celanese, as reported earlier, had net income in 1972 of $1.36 million, or $1.31 a share, up from $810,000 or 79 cents a year earlier.

COMPLETE SAWMILL is towed on a barge through the swing span of a railway bridge Wednesday in the False Creek area of Vancouver. The sawmill is bound for new owners at Port Kells. The two-storey building weighs about 350 tons complete with machinery on the second floor.

New Tax Laws Called Very Efficient by CTF

VANCOUVER (CP) — New federal tax regulations have confused professional tax advisers as well as many businessmen says Denham H. Kelsey, president of the Canadian Tax Foundation (CTF).

But the confusion will be only temporary because the new tax laws are basically, "a very efficient way of taxation."

Kelsey, who recently took over as president of the CTF, has argued consistently for tax laws that would be simple, understandable and helpful to economic development.

He was chairman of a committee of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants that studied federal tax-change proposals and later, as a private citizen, submitted a brief to Ottawa on the white paper on taxation. He also testified on the white paper before the Commons committee on finance, trade and economic affairs.

The structure finally worked out needs streamlining, he says, and he'd also like to see the mechanisms for streamlining it become more streamlined themselves.

"Many of the professional tax advisers have had to learn their trade all over again," he says, "and they will need at least another year to settle down and get comfortable with it."

Partly for this reason, and partly for the sake of the health of the business community, Kelsey is opposed to any further sweeping changes or upheavals in the tax system.

But he'll be working on modifications to the system for years to come.

The CTE has a membership of 5,200 lawyers and accountants and 640 corporations.

Kelsey sees his main job at the CTF as helping adjust the tax machinery so it runs as smoothly as possible.

Philosophically, he supports the idea of using the tax system to influence economic activity. This is where he disagrees with the Carter report, which preceded tax reform measures.

The Carter report argued that taxes should be neutral in their effect, "but in my experience, practical results have been obtained by using the tax system to stimulate the economy."

"Tax incentives have done a tremendous lot to develop Canada and stimulate activity."

His scope goes beyond just federal tax laws and as a chartered tax accountant, he's also concerned about "massive" problems of local government financing and the heavy dependence of the cities on property taxes.

Municipal dependence on property taxes is a serious strain on the resources of homeowners, he says. He'd like to see more co-operation between the various levels of government — federal, provincial and municipal.

'Nickel and Diming' of Executives

By
DUNCAN A. E. CAMPBELL
Kates, Peat, Marwick and Co.

Management Memo

One frequently runs across an executive who has become disenchanted with his company after only a short stay. One hears such comments as: "They are trying to chisel on their agreement" or "Why didn't they tell me they had planned to sell off part of the operation — now I am left with much less responsibility than I thought I would have." The occasional executive also says: "I resigned because the company refused to live up to its promises."

The cause of disenchantment could often have been avoided if the company had been a little less "fuzzy" in its thinking when negotiating with the new executive.

When a new executive is being hired or moved from one post to another it is common practice to negotiate the terms of employment broadly with the intention of fine-tuning the agreement later; that is, adding the specific details of incentive bonuses, stock options, title, authority, timing of promotion to chief executive officer and the like.

In most cases this process works well and is easy to live with because the primary objective of these early negotiations is to get the executive on the job.

But it can also pose problems. First, there is the type of problem where an event occurs that could not have been foreseen but which dramatically alters the advisability of fulfilling the general agreed conditions.

The acquisition of—or merger with another company, the disposal of a division, changes in capital structure can change the context within which stock options are promised; the death or resignation of an important executive can cause reorganization which will affect responsibilities; the introduction by a competitor of a major new product may raise questions as to the advisability of the current management incentive plan and so on.

Such events can usually be dealt with directly between the company and the new executive. However major their impact may be, they do not usually cause executive disenchantment.

The second kind of problem is the one that causes most concern. It is the tendency for broad agreements between the executive and the company to be expressed in unclear generalities; for example, "a substantial stock option" may mean entirely different things to the company and the new executive; what does "participation" mean — how, when and under what conditions?

When such uncertainty occurs there is real danger that a process of fine-tuning the agreement will leave the executive feeling that he is being "nickeled and dimed", i.e. that the company is chipping away at the broad agreement which brought him into the job. And at this point he starts to become disenchanted.

There is an extremely high cost attached to disenchantment. The contribution of a senior executive to the enterprise is far beyond his salary, benefits and attendant costs. It can be measured in terms of his impact on sales, growth, profit or such other critical factors. If the executive contributes less than his maximum, then the company is losing part of his contribution.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

However, trying and monotonous it may be, one of the ways to meet this situation is to try and consider ahead of time what events are likely to occur that can affect the agreement with a new executive.

Such an approach will not necessarily cover every eventuality — these are seldom known — but it will at least point out where and when it will be necessary to renegotiate and permit both the executive and the company to agree on the limits of applicability of the broad agreement.

It is also a good idea in both the broad and specific negotiations to consider the use of lawyers, tax specialists, consultants and accountants. This does not denote lack of trust, but rather the presence of complexities.

It may also result in a more cost effective agreement and should help to avoid legal, tax and financial pitfalls. It also provides an acceptable way to arbitrate if subsequent disagreements occur.

NEW MUTUAL FUND EYEING ARCTIC GAS

MONTREAL (CP) — Capital Dynamics Ltd. announced Wednesday it has formed All-Canadian Northern Energy Fund, a mutual fund that will invest in energy resources in Northern Canada and the North Sea off the coast of England.

Capital Dynamics currently manages four other mutual funds under the All-Canadian name.

Andre G. Grolimond, company president, told a news conference the new fund will concentrate on oil and gas developments but will also consider other energy developments such as uranium, coal and hydroelectric power.

Grolimond said the fund plans to raise $20 million in its first year, all in Canada. He could not specify what percentage of the funds will be invested in Canada.

The proportion of investment in the North Sea and Canada would vary depending on the amount of activity taking place in each area, particularly since operations in the North Sea are cyclical.

"We may increase our investment in one area or the other depending on the activity cycles."

NDP JUBILANT OVER POLL GAIN

OTTAWA (CP) — There was cautious jubilation in the New Democratic Party caucus Wednesday over the results of the latest Gallup Poll which show the party has picked up four points, indicating electoral approval of its present policy of keeping the Liberal minority government in power.

NDP spokesmen are confident that the sharp gain in their popularity can be attributed to their decision to try to keep parliament functioning and avoid an early election.

Progressive Conservative spokesmen were inclined to attribute their party's six-point drop to the impression that has gone across Canada that the Conservatives were following "obstructionist" tactics in the House.

(See Gallup Poll on Page 22.)

Writing Course Approved

Establishment of a creative writing department was approved by University of Victoria senate Wednesday.

Head of the new department, which will essentially be the existing creative writing division of the English department, will be English professor Robin Skelton.

"We are getting more and more people concerned to take up this particular field of study (writing) at the university level," Skelton told senate.

The 100 students enrolled in creative writing courses would be maintained or even increased in a separate department, he said.

The five faculty members needed for the new department would replace five similar positions in the English department, so the only extra money needed would be for a department secretary, a file cabinet and a lot of wastebaskets, said Skelton.

Most criticism of the new department from senate members was over UVic's lack of money to finance it.

Dr. Gerhart Friedmann questioned whether the senate should approve a new department "which has less social significance" than other new programs short of money.

A proposed child care program, a school of law and a school of social welfare, already approved by senate, still are without funds to get started.

Some senate members expressed concern earlier in the meeting that the child care program would not get off the ground by the fall. UVic president Dr. Hugh Farquhar assured them that "there's no dragging of feet in the matter whatsoever." The university simply doesn't have the $40,000 or $50,000 to hire a director to head the program, he said.

Farquhar told the senate the university would put in supplementary requests to the provincial government for money to fund the child care program.

All courses in the four-year program, except for one fourth-year seminar, already are offered at UVic.

Dr. G. Alexander Milton suggested the program could be started with a committee of faculty members instead of a director heading it.

Students Clash

CLAIRTON, Pa. (AP) — Scores of students clashed in the halls of Clairton high school Tuesday, despite the presence of police who had been warned of the confrontation. One student was injured in the incident, said by police to be a racial disturbance. Twenty-three students were taken into custody.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Norman McPherson has been named as manager of transport operations for northern British Columbia for the B.C. Railway.

SHARES SOLD

Victoria Press Ltd., publishing company of the Times and the Daily Colonist, has sold its three per cent interest in Premier Cablevision Ltd. of Vancouver.

Victoria Press vice-president and Times publisher Stuart Underhill said today the sale was the result of a straightforward financial decision.

Underhill's membership on Premier's board of directors, now terminated, and Victoria Press's interest in the cablevision company had been the target of repeated attacks by Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen, who said there was a threat of media monopoly.

Asked to comment, Pollen said he welcomed the move as being in the public interest.

Kennedy Lake Beach Excluded

A beach area at Kennedy Lake has been excluded from phase one of Pacific Rim National Park in a boundary agreement signed by federal and provincial governments.

The Kennedy Lake property will become a provincial park, Bob Ahrens, director of the provincial park branch, said today.

The land on both sides of the highway from Kennedy Lake to the junction of the Tofino-Ucluelet Highway has also been excluded from the park. Otherwise, the boundary remains the same.

The land east of the Tofino-Ucluelet highway which the former Social Credit government wanted to exchange for three lakes in the Nitinat district, remains within the federal park.

The agreement finalizes the boundary for this section of the park.

The governments agreed to defer finalizing the boundary of phase three of the national park — the Bamfield area and the west coast trail — until April 1, 1974.

The three Nitinat lakes — Tsusiat, Hobitan and Squalicum — are expected to be included within the national park.

Union Bid Hearing Adjourned

VANCOUVER — A B.C. Labor Relations Board hearing into a bid by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada (PPWC) to take over bargaining rights at the Somass sawmill in Port Alberni was adjourned Wednesday.

Representatives of the PPWC and the International Woodworkers of America (IWA), the current bargaining agent at the 1,000-employee mill, attended the hearing.

The PPWC requested an adjournment to allow time for its lawyer, Gerard Culhane, to prepare a written reply. He has one week and Laxton will have four days after that for a counter-reply.

Storm Kills Cattle

LAMAR, Colo. (CP) — Cattle losses in storm-stricken southeastern Colorado were estimated Tuesday at $14 million by state agriculture commissioner Clinton Jeffers. Figures on stock losses arrived at Jeffers's Denver office Tuesday as cattlemen were able to reach some livestock rangeland areas for the first time in more than a week.

Probation

VANCOUVER (CP) — David Alan Stewart, 19, and Patrick Brian McKay, 18, were each fined $1,500 and placed on two years' probation Wednesday for possession of a dangerous weapon, a molotov cocktail, at a disturbance at a rock concert at The Coliseum.

Some of the people who drive away in a new Pinto arrived in a little import.

It could be they're discovering that Pinto offers some things that the little imports do not.

Maybe you've noticed that some Ford Dealer used car lots have little imports for sale. Some of the people who owned these imports, traded them in for a new Ford Pinto. It could be they're discovering that Pinto offers some things the little imports do not.

Pinto has had certain product advantages going for it right from the very beginning that VW, Datsun and Toyota still don't have. Rack-and-pinion steering is one. The system used by some of the world's great racing cars because it makes for precise, responsive steering. Pinto's rack-and-pinion steering system allows you to get into tight spots—and out of them—a little easier.

Another of Pinto's advantages is a wider stance than VW Super Beetle, Datsun 510 and Toyota Corolla. That means better stability on a windy day.

In the last two years, a lot of things have happened which have added to Pinto's basic value. For example: we've made over 70 little improvements since Pinto was introduced. Among other things, we've added strong steel guard rails to Pinto's side doors; put in extra sound insulation to increase Pinto's quiet ride; put extra padding in the seats to make Pinto even more comfortable. We've also made some slight technical changes to improve the transmission and suspension components. These improvements weren't made for show. They were made to simply make Pinto a better car for you.

Another of our actions was to take some optional features and put them together in a group that offered particular value. This group was and still is priced at only $100.00 (based on manufacturer's suggested retail price) and, on the 2-door sedan, includes front disc brakes, protective body-side mouldings, whitewalls, wheel covers, and an electric rear window defroster. For the Pinto Wagon this package priced at $100.00 includes tinted glass in place of the front disc brakes, which are standard on the wagon.

Of course, if you decide not to add this value option group, your Pinto will cost you that much less.

The choice is up to you. You see, with Pinto, you don't have to pay for what you don't really want.

And choice extends all the way into a selection of models. Since Pinto was introduced as an economical 2-door sedan, we've added a handy 3-door Runabout, a Pinto Wagon, and a Pinto Wagon with an attractive Squire Option.

Some of the people who drive away from their Ford Dealers in a new Pinto arrived in a little import.

The various improvements we've added to Pinto's basic value in the last two years and the choice of models may be the reasons why. See your Ford Dealer. Chances are you'll find some reasons of your own.

New Labor Act

EDMONTON (CP) — The government Wednesday introduced a huge, revamped labor act which, it says, tries to put the emphasis on collective bargaining rather than on strikes.

The act, however, contains no new restrictions on strikes.

Labor Minister Bert Hohol said it adds, in some circumstances, an increased number of steps in the bargaining process to give the disputing parties a greater chance of reaching agreement without resorting to a strike or lockout.

He said the use of labor courts to settle disputes had not proven successful in places where it had been tried, "so we've got to improve on what we've got." In addition, compulsory arbitration — although sometimes necessary — is a "complex area in which no one wins."

Among the changes is provision for establishment of a "voluntary collective bargaining arbitration board."

"The board would be set up at the request of both parties," the minister said.

Another change enlarges the board of industrial relations so it will be able to hold more hearings.

Hohol also said Alberta is moving in the direction of the "cooling-off period" for labor and management as provided under legislation in the United States.

The new act would permit the minister to call in both sides for a final review of the issues separating them before the strike.

Fines for illegal strikes are increased under the new act to a maximum of $1,000 a day from the present $50 a day.

Wage Demand Rises

SASKATOON (CP) — Striking city electrical workers will increase wage demands 10 cents each week they stay off the job, a union official said Wednesday.

Jack Lovell, president of Local 319 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, said the union has lowered initial hourly wage increase demands to 80 cents, but will raise that figure a dime a week to make up money lost while members are on strike.

Bank Ad Hit

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Attorney-General A. H. Mackling expressed concern Wednesday about a Royal Bank advertisement which offers to pay up to $25 for licence plates to customers who take out automobile loans.

Replying to a question in the legislature from MLA Tom Barrow (NDP—Flin Flon), the minister said the provincial government would want to discourage bonuses which encourage persons to go into debt.

Lottery Profitable

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba lottery based on the Canadian Curling Championships held last month in Edmonton yielded $350,000 for recreation and cultural programs in Manitoba.

Recreation Minister Larry Desjardins said Wednesday this amount brings to $2.6 million the amount the government-operated lottery has yielded for such programs since the Manitoba Lotteries Commission set up operation in 1970.

Group Action Backed

EDMONTON (CP) — Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Herb Gray said Wednesday he supports legal aid being made available for groups of people but any action in that field would be a provincial responsibility.

Gray said he is personally "sympathetic" to a program that would financially assist "classes of people," such as the poor, who feel they have a grievance and want to take legal action.

Aid Due Soon

EDMONTON (CP) — Legislation to provide funds and a policy to help children with learning problems will be introduced within two weeks, Education Minister Lou Hyndman said Wednesday.

Hyndman told a delegation from St. Albert and Sturgeon County, the legislation will provide provincial assistance to school boards in rural sections so they can properly tackle what he called the "major problem" of learning disability.

SIDEWALK CAFES, PUBS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A special city council committee has begun drafting proposals that could lead to sidewalk cafes here this summer, and neighborhood pubs in the fall.

Ald. Setty Pendakur, committee chairman, said the committee will suggest that council hold a plebiscite in the fall on the neighborhood pub concept.

He said the committee decided no more than 100 seats should be allowed in such an establishment, and they should be permitted only in existing commercial zones.

If sidewalk cafes are permitted, said Ald. Pendakur, provision would have to be made for pedestrians.

First in Canada

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Workers at the North Shore Citizen have approved a 21-month contract with Horizon Publications Ltd. and become members of the first union-organized weekly newspaper in Canada.

About 21 editorial, advertising and business office employees, represented by the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild, are covered by the contact.

Elevated Centre

RICHMOND (CP) — The advisory planning committee heard a Chamber of Commerce proposal to elevate a shopping centre 20 feet above the municipality's main street. Dress shop owner Jim Fodchuk said this plan would stop new shopping centres from "cannibalizing the existing one.

Mails Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — Samuel Stewart, 51, a former Vancouver postal clerk, was placed on two years' probation after he pleaded guilty to a charge of theft from the mails. He stole two $5 bills while employed in the dead latter section of the post office.

Unharmed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bozo Bekavac, 33, escaped unharmed Wednesday when his car went through an iron railing on Vancouver's Cambie Bridge and plunged into 20-foot-deep water in False Creek.

Bekavac said he escaped through an open window and reached shore.

Ottawa Protests

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Cretien has sent a telegram to Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer protesting the provincial government's plan to include part of the Indian reserve here in the proposed new city of Kamloops.

Len Marchand, (L—Kamloops-Cariboo) said "both myself and the minister oppose any inclusion of any Indian lands in a municipality without a vote by the Indian people. It is illegal."

Brenda Pact

PEACHLAND (CP) — Workers at Brenda Mines operation here, members of the United Steel Workers of America, voted Wednesday 114 to 98 to accept a mediator's report calling for a two-year contract with a nine per cent wage increase retroactive to March 1, followed by a five per cent increase in April 1974 and a two per cent increase in October 1974.

Natural Causes

VANCOUVER (CP) — An autopsy has revealed the death of hotel owner Verle Ferguson 19 hours after a beer parlor fight was due to natural causes. Aman held in police custody has been released. The autopsy revealed Ferguson died of a cerebral hemorrhage.

UVic Huddles On Desperate Money Problem

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

University of Victoria president Dr. Hugh Farquhar called a general meeting of faculty and administrative staff for 2 this afternoon at which he is expected to discuss the university's acute financial problems.

Farquhar is expected to give a "state of the nation" address on the university and may disclose which areas are going to suffer budget cutbacks, a source on UVic's administrative staff said today.

The university is facing a projected deficit of nearly $1 million between its operating budget for 1973 and the government grant it expects to get.

The Times tried to reach Farquhar this morning to ask how the university will meet this deficit, but Farquhar's secretary said he was too busy today to talk to the press.

She phoned back however, to say that Farquhar had instructed her to say that he did not know what areas of the university would be affected by cutbacks.

STRONG STATEMENT

At Wednesday evening's UVic senate meeting, Farquhar again warned senate members of the lack of money this year for any new programs, such as child care or law.

"I can't say strongly enough how serious the financial situation in the university is," he said.

"We have to find approximately $1 million so we can function at all this year," Farquhar added.

Board of governors chairman David Angus said today there will have to be cutbacks in some existing programs to meet the projected deficit.

"We have been having some communication with the minister of education explaining our position," he said. The board of governors has also discussed with the possibility of getting supplementary grants to fund the new programs planned, he said.

Angus said there are few alternative sources of money the university can turn to besides the provincial government.

"It would be entirely self-defeating to increase student fees," he said. UVic's enrolment has been dropping in recent years.

UVic's financial plight has been the theme of most of Farquhar's public speeches in recent months.

As guest speaker at a Canadian Red Cross society luncheon Monday, which was attended by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, Farquhar "urgently appealed to the government" to come through with more money.

TERRA NOVA HOME BY LATE JUNE

The Esquimalt-based destroyer-escort HMCS Terra Nova, serving as stand-by base for Canadian troops serving on the International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam, should be home by late June.

Rear-Admiral R. H. Leir, commander maritime forces Pacific, says if necessary the Terra Nova will be relieved by HMCS Kootenay. The Kootenay would leave CFB Esquimalt about May 14. Should this happen, the Terra Nova will reach Esquimalt not later than the end of June.

Leir emphasized that the decision to relieve Terra Nova has not yet been taken.

Such a decision, he said, would be made by the federal government as the situation in South East Asia develops.

'That's How Heroin Spreads'

Disagreement with the tactics of narcotics officers is not a valid defence to a trafficking charge, Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake was told today before ordering a four-year prison term for a convicted trafficker.

Keith Alan Iverson, 22, of 1115 Collinson, was convicted of selling one cap of heroin Aug. 1 to RCMP undercover agent Blaine Froats.

Defence counsel Gordon Macdonald said "this was not a case of the accused approaching the customer."

He said Iverson was approached by Froats who gave every indication he was a user.

He was "posing as an addict," said Macdonald.

Prosecutor Michael Hutchison said Macdonald's submission "is a point which we often hear in cases of trafficking, particularly where we are dealing with a situation involving an undercover operative, as though there is something wrong with the police authorities sending undercover operators into the drug sub-culture to attempt to stop the trafficking in odious substances like heroin."

While Hutchison said there was only one cap involved in this case, "the fact of the matter is that virtually all of the trafficking in the substance at its street level will be with one or two capsules for the immediate use of a heroin user or potentially a non-user who may be using it for the first time."

"I think little turns on the fact that only one capsule of heroin was sold.

"There is no doubt that this accused himself is an addict and there's equally no doubt, I submit, that he was quite prepared to support his addiction by making available to others in the community capsules of heroin for their consumption.

"And that is how heroin spreads throughout this community, in small doses from what is colloquially known as a street pusher.

"I have the greatest sympathy for this accused. He is a man in the grip of a monster he cannot control . . . the community deserves as much sympathy as the accused."

Before sentence Drake said he was concerned simply with this particular case "and not the background."

"Nevertheless," he said, "the public interest is involved in a matter of this sort and where an offence of this kind is so prevalent as it is and is so dangerous and so grievous an offence, it is a situation where only severity is justice."

Gorst Knocks 'Commercial' Erickson Plan

Taxpayers have laid out $1 million to buy the Ocean Cement site, prime property on Victoria's Inner Harbor, on the understanding that it will be open space — not stores and apartments, Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst said today.

Gorst said he was dismayed when he viewed architect Arthur Erickson's preliminary plan for the future of the Inner Harbor.

"It just seemed to me highly commercial."

Gorst said in an interview he was particularly upset to see a 300-400 parking space building with tier-style stores and apartments on it located where the Ocean Cement works now stands.

Apart from the site having been bought with public funds for open space purposes, Gorst said, the model showed buildings stretching north from the site as far as Johnson Street bridge, including the double-towered Reid centre.

"My first impression was that it was a completely commercial concept rather than a people thing as claimed by various parties in the matter."

"I don't see why the entire Inner Harbor and the foreshore along Wharf Street should not be simply nice, grassy banks."

Gorst, a proponent of a Provincial Capital Commission for Victoria similar to the federal National Capital Commission in Ottawa, listed the current injection of public funds into the Inner Harbor area:

— $280,000 towards a walkway beneath the Causeway fronting the Empress Hotel.

—$220,000 extra for the walkway project, hurriedly approved this week and source unknown, according to city officials.

— $1 million for the Ocean Cement site.

— $60,000 for Menzies Street landscaping.

— $90,000 for Belleville Street improvement at Laurel Point.

"The provincial government should definitely have some input into planning of this area," Gorst added.

He said Victoria city council's apparent willingness to almost double its expenditure on the current walkway project indicated that Erickson's master-plan was "being pushed."

He said he was not convinced current plans for the foreshore were people-oriented.

"For example, it was claimed that the Reid Centre would be 85 per cent open to people — but it's a shopping centre, so why wouldn't it be open to people?"

The city should look more carefully at its downtown foreshore plans, with more involvement of the public, Gorst said, noting he did not understand why Erickson, commissioned by the city for $35,000, felt obliged to display his ideas only to a select group of officials and businessmen.

In particular, the original purpose in buying the Ocean Cement site should not be forgotten, he said.

He added that he intends to speed up his advocacy of a provincial capital commission, because things are developing so quickly in the area.

City Offered Backup Help

Garden City Ambulance has offered Victoria council 24-hour emergency backup support for the city's proposed new ambulance service.

In a brief scheduled for submission to city council at 2 p.m. today, company president J. R. Knezacky says while the municipalities of Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt operate with only one ambulance, "their combined emergency calls do not equal those of the city of Victoria."

Garden City, therefore, is "prepared to enter into a contract for the very vital backup service that is required."

The ambulance firm has provided emergency service for the city since 1968 and now has three ambulances at its disposal.

The new service, scheduled to take over July 1 when the Garden City contract has expired, will be operated jointly by the city and Victoria General Hospital and use only one ambulance.

Knezacky's brief says "the city of Victoria cannot at any time feel that in an emergency where more than one ambulance is required it can always count on help from private or other municipal services.

"They could be either too busy or too late to aid in a City of Victoria emergency.

"And in the case of the other three municipalities, if they were able to help Victoria, their municipalities would be without an ambulance service."

Knezacky would not say how much an emergency backup service would cost the city but says it would have to be worked out on a year-to-year contract basis, since without an established arrangement, the firm could not afford to keep a fully-staffed ambulance on duty for city emergencies.

Knezacky said he agrees government supported regional ambulance service must be developed eventually but even then private firms will still be necessary and will probably receive government subsidies.

Meanwhile, the nine employees of Garden City were also scheduled to approach city council this afternoon to as for a two-week postponement of council's final decision to establish the new ambulance service.

At the end of two weeks the ambulance drivers say they will submit an alternative proposal to council which will provide better ambulance service than the municipal-hospital scheme and costing no more than the $110,000 estimated for that scheme.

In a brief delivered Wednesday to the residence of assistant city manager Colin Crisp the ambulance drivers say their proposal will work on a system of two-vehicle coverage during the day and one-vehicle with a back-up unit at night.

The non-profit service would be controlled by the city as a public utility and provide training standards equal to those of Metropolitan Ambulance service in Vancouver.

Money Sought To Save Centre

Victoria Teachers' Project has appealed to the provincial government's special children's committee for money to save its learning assistance centre.

For a year and a half the centre, now located at Beacon Hill School, has been funded through Local Initiative Programs at a cost of about $100,000 a year.

But school director Bill Benson fears the project won't receive L.I.P. money this year and even if it does the federal grant is not large enough to provide the kind of top-notch facilities desired.

The budget Benson has submitted to the children's committee requests a total of $150,000 to $180,000 to continue the program with the same amount of staff or $306,000 to expand to 20 teachers.

The school has 12 full-time teachers who work on a one-to-one basis with 60 students needing special assistance with learning problems.

But the teachers make as little as one-half the salary they would receive in the Victoria school system.

Money is also short for books, audio-visual aids and equipment.

Last winter during the cold snap the school ran out of coal.

Benson thinks the school is providing a vital service to children who can't get the extra help they need in regular classrooms — a service which would cost $360 a month if parents were forced to pay expenses.

He says local school boards have co-operated with the project, which operates daily and often at nights and on Saturdays, but the boards are not able to help with financing.

There is a waiting list of 18 to get into the school and Benson says about 200 children in the area need this individual type of learning assistance.

Clam Diggers Face Big Fine In Closed Areas

Any person found digging clams in Esquimalt Lagoon or in any other area designated as contaminated can be fined up to $1,000, a federal fisheries officer warned today.

His warning follows a federal health department order issued a month ago closing a number of clam digging areas on Vancouver Island due to pollution.

"There appears to be still some people who are not aware of the order," the official said. "We have stopped many people from digging clams in Esquimalt Lagoon. They face the possibility of a fine if they continue to do so."

He said clam digging on the east side of the Saanich Peninsula is also forbidden.

Cook Beaten, Robbed of $341

A 36-year-old armed forces cook was beaten and robbed of $341 in a parking lot late Wednesday night.

Cpl. Lloyd Steinaker said today he was on his way to collect his car and drive back to the Pat Bay base shortly after midnight.

Two men in their early twenties attacked him, knocked him to the ground and stole his wallet with $341 inside.

JUNE 1 DEADLINE for completion of work to widen Parson's Bridge to four lanes in time for peak summer traffic may involve night shifts for Dura Construction Ltd. workers. Night work would permit complete closure of the present two-lane span giving workers more elbow room. Pressure in the water pipe carried by the small auxiliary bridge shown above has been reduced to curb danger of flooding if the pipe is damaged. The pipe is one of the main lines carrying water to Greater Victoria from Sooke. (Irving Strickland photo.)

21% Hike Accepted

Inside staff at City Hall voted Wednesday night to accept a new two-year contract providing an increase of just over 21 per cent in salaries.

Ian Fraser, president of Local 388 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said both the bargaining committee and executive recommended acceptance and the membership supported this with "a good majority."

The agreement also provides some changes in contract language and a survey of job reclassifications, he said.

City council was to make its decision at its regular meeting this afternoon.

Labor, Bosses to Speak Freely

A top-level labor-management conference will be held behind closed doors Friday and Saturday in the Empress Hotel.

The conference, organized by the labor department and originally scheduled for Harrison Hot Springs, may extend into Sunday.

It is being held privately so that labor and management spokesmen can speak freely with labor department officials and three special advisers appointed earlier by the government to review legislation and consider and recommend changes.

Labor Minister Bill King has stressed that the government will not introduce major changes in labor legislation until after conferences such as this.

This would indicate that changes will be legislated at the fall sitting of the legislature.

The government's three advisors are Noel Hall, director of the institute of industrial relations at the University of B.C., James Matkin, a UBC law professor, and Donald McTaggart, a Vancouver lawyer.

The advisers, King and labor department officials will meet Friday with Canadian unions outside the B.C. Federation of Labor, including the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada and Christian Labor Association of Canada, and with management.

On Saturday, there will be discussions with B.C. Federation of Labor officials, on behalf of the affiliated unions, and with the Teamsters Union and the Hospital Employees Union, as well as management representatives.

Hockey: Roger Crozier —A Caper to Remember

I suppose there are two ways to describe what Buffalo coach Joe Crozier did to the Montreal Canadiens at the Forum on Tuesday night. And did so well.

Some might call it "bush", calling for a measurement of goalie Ken Dryden's pads with only seconds remaining in regulation time and the teams tied at 2-2. But to many others, it was clearly a case of one-upmanship, and Crozier won going away.

Let's analyze the facts briefly.

Earlier this year Montreal coach Scotty Bowman called Buffalo goalie Dave Dryden for having an oversized stick. Dryden got a penalty. Montreal held on for a victory in that game. Crozier vowed revenge.

Earlier in this series, Bowman went scurrying to National Hockey League referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison complaining about the manner in which Crozier had been making substitutions. Crozier called Bowman a cry-baby. But he was only sharpening the needle.

Tuesday the Sabres were hanging on late in the third period. The Habs had tied the score and were threatening to put the game away when Crozier acted. Any help he could give his team, a third-year expansion club, he would. And he was ready.

He called Dryden for having oversized pads (10" is the maximum width). He knew the rules, and that there would be a penalty to start overtime. The Sabres would have the extra man. The Habs might be upset. Bowman most certainly would be.

Clancy Had a Way With Him

It was strictly legal, and a caper well executed. Bowman had been upstaged, and was to be even more so when, in a counter-move, he asked for a measurement of goalie Roger Crozier's pads. "Can't do it until after the first overtime," ruled Morrison.

Crozier had just scored a magnificent double. Even if his team didn't score with the odd man, the tide had turned, and the Sabres were to win. And it just has to figure that Crozier's move, coming when it did, and the Habs outplaying the Sabres, probably saved the game, and besides, made history. For Bowman, it was an egg-on-his-face look.

There's more than one way to fire up a club, however, and the redoubtable King Clancy had few peers. Once when Toronto was matched against Boston in a two-game, total-goal playoff, the Bruins had won the first game, 3-0, and had scored early in the first period of the second game for a 4-0 series lead. Clancy wasn't too pleased and when big Charlie Conacher complained to him that Red Beattie of the Bruins had been giving him a bad time with his persistent checking, Clancy replied: "Why don't you belt him?"

Conacher complied with Clancy's advice and crashed an elbow into Beattie's face. Referee Odie Cleghorn ignored the infraction. A few minutes later, Clancy tripped Eddie Shore, the muscle of the Bruins. Shore screamed: "Trip, Odie, I was tripped." Cleghorn ignored the plea. Clancy prodded Shore "He's robbing you."

Buck Turned Out the Lights

Shortly thereafter, Toronto's Red Horner deflected a shot into the goal from the goalmouth area, and Boston claimed Horner was in the crease illegally. Clancy continued to badger Shore about the incompetence of the official.

Shore finally blew, and fired the puck at Cleghorn, hitting the referee in the posterior. "You're gone," said Cleghorn. Infuriated, Shore threw the puck into the crowd. "That will be 10 minutes more," intoned the official.

Suffice to add the Leafs scored three goals while shore was off, won the game, 8-3, and the series, 8-6. Conacher got three goals, but the real hero was Clancy.

Hockey fans here will likely recall a different play used by Maple Leaf manager Buck Houle. Portland coach Hal Laycoe used to have his team go for a skate about 40 minutes before game time, and in one playoff game Houle figured he might have a plan to upset the Buckaroos, and perhaps Laycoe.

So when the Bucks took to the ice, there were no lights on overhead. Players skated in near darkness. Laycoe was furious. He charged to the Maple Leaf office only to be informed that Houle would be back "in about 20 minutes", and nothing could be done about the lights until he returned. Yes, later, the Leafs won, although Houle was advised by league HQ never to do it again.

Still, that was only child's play compared to the thought and planning that went into that incident at Montreal on Tuesday.

Crozier's Caper was delightful indeed and also why the Canadiens crumbled.

Goalie 'Beyond Reproach'

GLENN HALL
. . . it isn't so

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Wednesday he is convinced that former NHL goalie Glenn Hall never was involved in gambling on NHL games.

"I have no doubt whatsoever that Glenn Hall's conduct during his 16 seasons in the league is beyond reproach," said Campbell in a statement.

Meanwhile, Hall said in Edmonton he hopes to have an investigation of charges that a Chicago Black Hawks goalie bet against his team in an NHL game in 1961. He did not specify what type of investigation he wants.

Hall, in the NHL from 1954 to 1971, played with Chicago for 10 years, from 1957 to 1967.

Theodore Aboud, a former bookmaker now serving time for fraud, testified Tuesday at the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime that a lot of money was won in bets on an NHL game in 1961 after a Chicago goaltender bet on New York Rangers, the opposing team.

"I don't know whether the goalie had fixed the game but it looks that way," Aboud said.

Aboud in his testimony did not mention the name of the goalie he referred to. But Hall said the inquiry witness could only have been referring to him since he was Chicago's regular goalie and played all 70 games in 1960-61 and 1961-62.

Campbell said he could not believe the charge against Hall.

"Throughout his lengthy career, Glenn's reputation for absolute integrity among his fellow players, executives and hosts of fans is so well established by his personal conduct that it is impossible to give any credence to the undocumented charge that was made about him at the inquiry."

"People that I know, know that I didn't bet," Hall said, adding he has been in contact with his lawyer and was "trying to place phone calls to the right people."

MONTREAL EXPOS were thrown a curve this week when nearly six inches of snow fell on Jarry Park, where National League team is to open it's baseball season Friday. Crusader Goalie Tough in Clutch

By UPI INTERNATIONAL

The Philadelphia Blazers have learned first-hand why Gerry Cheevers is called a money goaltender.

Cheevers turned in a fourth straight superb effort in goal Wednesday night as the Cleveland Crusaders whipped the Blazers 6-2 to sweep their first-round best-of-seven World Hockey Association playoff series.

Cheevers, who helped the Boston Bruins to a Stanley Cup title in the National Hockey League last season, allowed only six goals in the Crusaders' four-game sweep of Philadelphia.

Six players scored for the Crusaders, who will meet the winner of the New England-Ottawa series.

Philadelphia's Danny Lawson, who led the WHA this season with 63 goals, didn't score once during the playoffs.

"Now I know what everybody means when they say the hot goalie was in the playoffs," Lawson said. "This is the first time I've played against a guy like that. It seems that we had the best shots but Cheevers was always there and it was discouraging."

Cheevers said he didn't care whether his team faced New England or Ottawa in the semifinals.

In other playoff action Wednesday night, the Winnipeg Jets beat the Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 in overtime to take a 3-1 lead in their series and the Los Angeles Sharks beat the Houston Aeros 3-2 to go ahead in that series, 2-1.

Norm Beaudin scored the winning goal at 3:12 of a sudden-death overtime period to give Winnipeg its victory over the Fighting Saints.

With 45 seconds left in regular time, Bill Sutherland of the Jets recorded his second playoff goal to tie the score, 2-2.

End of Bernie Say Blazers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The owner and president of Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association said Wednesday they were through with goalie Bernie Parent.

Owner Bernie Brown and President Dick Olson made the comment at a news conference minutes after their team was eliminated from the playoffs.

The Blazers were swept out in four straight games by Cleveland Crusaders. Cleveland applied the crusher Wednesday night 6-2.

Parent tried to renegotiate his contract during the playoffs and walked out after one game of the best-of-seven quarter-final against Cleveland.

Brown and Olson also cast aside rumors the team would be moved to Miami, Seattle, New Orleans, San Diego, or Toronto.

Olso said of the Parent case that the goalie's lawyer exercised an option to declare the player's contract voided, although all the provisions had been lived up to.

He said there was an irrevocable letter of credit for $600,000 in the bank to secure the five-year, $750,000 pact signed with Parent. He said the goalie had been compensated this season according to a deferred payment plan of Parent's choosing.

Phil Watson, the team's director of personnel, related a story of Parent's surprise when notified that his agent had voided the contract. Watson said Parent wanted to continue in the playoffs and remain in Philadelphia.

Olson contended that Parent's lawyer tried to hold a gun to the Blazer executive's head, using the playoffs to get a renegotiated contract.

"He, (the attorney) didn't think I'd call his bluff. I take the blame for this team not making it through the playoffs. It was a matter of principle and I'd do it again."

The Blazers' executives said the team would operate in Philadelphia next season, but might play its games at the 16,600-seat Spectrum, home of Philadelphia Flyers of the rival National Hockey League.

They said talks already had started with the owners of the Spectrum, who include Ed Snider, chairman of the board of the Flyers. The Blazers played at the 9,200-seat Civic Center this season.

Horton Called Key To Buffalo Success

BUFFALO (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach, general manager of Buffalo Sabres, describes Tim Horton as a 43-year-old defenceman with a 30-year-old body.

And Imlach subscribes to the theory that the five-foot, 10-inch, 180-pound Horton is one reason the Sabres will entertain Montreal Canadiens here tonight in the sixth game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final round instead of watching other National Hockey League playoff games.

While the now-famed French Connection of centre Gilbert Perreault, left-winger Richard Martin and Rene Robert, along with the superb goaltending of veteran Roger Crozier have been widely acclaimed, the work of Horton on the Buffalo blueline has remained effective, if at times unnoticed.

He turned in a strong performance in Montreal Tuesday night as the Sabres handed the Canadiens their second straight setback of the series as Buffalo won a 3-2 decision on Robert's overtime goal.

The Sabres are hoping for a similar display from Horton tonight, when the two teams clash here in the sixth game with the Canadiens leading 3-2 in the series.

Tonight's game will be televised nationally by the CBC beginning at 5 p.m. PST.

Horton was one of half-a-dozen players given a rest Wednesday by Buffalo coach Joe Crozier. Other absentees from the workout held at a suburban rink were defencemen Larry Hillman and Tracy Pratt, forwards Don Luce and Craig Ramsay, and netminder Crozier.

Coach Crozier held a free-skating workout for the players to iron out the kinks from the lengthy Tuesday night game. He then worked individually with rookie defenceman Jim Schoenfeld, right-winger Larry Mickey and the Perreault line.

Crozier refused to discuss Tuesday night's victory and said he wanted his players to concentrate on tonight's game.

Meanwhile, the Canadiens arrived here late Wednesday night without left-winger Marc Tardif and with defenceman Guy Lapointe on the limp.

Tardif required eight stitches to close a cut on his left eyelid after being struck by the stick of team-mate Rejean Houle. Houle was body-checked heavily by Horton in Tuesday's game and in the crash his stick caught Tardif in the eye.

Lapointe suffered an injury to his right knee as he blocked a Martin slapshot during the overtime period of the same contest.

He will skate today pending a decision on his availability for tonight's game.

Without Tardif and Lapointe — if the latter is unable to play— Montreal coach Scotty Bowman could dress rookies Steve Shutt and Larry Robinson as their replacements.

Neither Shutt nor Robinson has dressed for any of the five previous games.

Flyer Coach Likes Where He Stands

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Coach Fred Shero isn't positive that his Philadelphia Flyers are finally going to advance past the National Hockey League quarterfinals, but he speaks like a man who has assessed the situation and likes where he stands.

The Flyers lead the Minnesota North Stars 3-2 in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup series. The sixth and possibly final game begins here at 9 p.m. PST tonight.

"The North Stars have to come to us now," Shero said. "We can go into their rink and be more aggressive. We can press 'em a little harder in their end.

"They're the ones who have to be cautious now and the longer the game goes, the more they'll have to open up."

Philadelphia has bowed out in three previous attempts to get by the NHL quarter-finals, twice to St. Louis and once to Chicago. Minnesota has won twice and lost twice in the quarter-finals, but never has gone past the semi-finals.

This year, the word was that the Flyers' aggressive play would be costly in a close-checking playoff against the experienced North Stars.

Minnesota took 1-0 and 2-1 leads in the series, but the youthful Flyers came back with a 3-0 victory at Minnesota and a 3-2 overtime triumph Tuesday in Philadelphia.

En route to its advantage, the Flyers have defied an NHL tradition that a team cannot afford to be short-handed in the critical playoff atmosphere.

Tuesday, the Flyers dared Minnesota seven times to score with a man advantage. Minnesota never did. In fact, the North Stars have tallied on only two of 33 power play situations in the five games.

Minnesota had held Philadelphia's power play, the most prolific in the NHL, to one goal in 17 tries until Tuesday. Then Rick MacLeish scored twice on power plays to give the Flyers their first two goals in the game, which has won eventually by Gary Dornhoefer's overtime tally.

GUIDOLIN ON WAY OUT

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins had barely skated off the ice after they were knocked out of Stanley Cup competition by New York Rangers Tuesday night when rumors started circulating that coach Bep Guidolin would not be back next year.

According to Canadian reporters, John Ferguson, a former winger with the Canadiens, may soon be leaving Montreal to coach the Bruins.

CANADA ENTERS TEAM

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The United States and Canada will send teams to the world junior hockey championship at Prague, Czechoslovakia, next December.

Former Cougars Shine in U.S.

Ron Grahame, who played goal for Victoria Cougars in the 1967-68 and 1968-69 hockey seasons, has been named to the All-American college team.

A standout in Victoria both seasons, Grahame accepted a hockey scholarship to the University of Denver in the fall of 1969 and reached his peak in his senior year.

Grahame was named the most valuable player in the Western Conference and was picked to the all-star team after leading Denver Pioneers to the conference title. The Denver club was edged in the NCAA final 3-2 by Wisconsin, the conference runner-up.

Two other former Cougar players, Doug Gibson and Alex Shibicky, as well as a player Cougars once owned but couldn't sign, also helped spur Denver to an outstanding season.

The unsigned Cougar, defenceman Bruce Affleck of Penticton, was selected to the conference all-star team in his freshman year.

Former Saint Joins Bombers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers have announced the signing of veteran flanker Bob Larose and rookie running back Virgil Robinson to their Western Football Conference club.

Robinson, six feet, 198 pounds, was a second round draft choice of the Green Bay Packers in 1971 after attending Grambling University. He was traded to New Orleans Saints that year, then returned to school.

Bull-Fight Set For Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Bull-fighting will make its debut here when a three-day event opens at the forum May 18.

The spectacle will be under the direction of Alfredo Ovelha of Lisbon, Portugal, who has had 30 years experience in bull-fighting. Eighteen bulls will be brought in from Portugal for the event.

It's Off to School For Golfing Girls

In a bid to promote interest among young girls, the Vancouver Island Division of the Canadian Ladies Golf Association has arranged a three-day golf school.

The clinic, open to all girls 18 years or younger as of Aug. 31, 1973, will be held April 24-26 at Douglas Golfland.

Included for the $10 it costs to join will be golf instruction, talks on handicapping and rules, etiquette and sportsmanship and lunch each day. Officials will arrange billeting for out-of-town students if they require it, and golf clubs will be available if needed.

Pro Laurie Carroll will head staff giving instruction at Douglas Golfland each day between 9 and 11 a.m. After lunch and talks at Playland Curling Club each day, the young golfers return to Golfland for another two hours of instruction and competition.

The golfers will be divided into three groups, low and medium handicappers, those with higher handicaps who have some playing experience, and those with no handicap and beginners.

On the last afternoon, the golf students will watch an exhibition match at Gorge Vale between Carroll and city women's champion Dale Shaw.

It is not necessary to be a club member in order to attend the school. Further details may be obtained by calling Mrs. J. L. Campbell at 592-7180 or Esther Barnes at 592-2959.

Winds of Change to Hit Canucks—Hall

VANCOUVER (CP) — There will be no change in the day-to-day operation of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League despite the conviction of club president Tom Scallen on charges of theft of $3 million and issuing a false prospectus, a club director said Wednesday.

"The running of the hockey club was going to be changed anyway," said Coleman E. Hall, in an interview from Hawaii.

Asked to elaborate, Mr. Hall said there were "other considerations besides the right of first refusal" attached to a $1.5-million loan Scallen recently obtained from the Bank of British Columbia.

The loan, verified during the B.C. Supreme Court trail of Scallen and club vice-president Lyman Walters, was guaranteed by Hall, fellow director Cyrus McLean and Vancouver lawyer Arthur Fouks.

Scallen was found guilty on the two charges Tuesday, while Walters, charged with issuing a false prospectus, was acquitted by the jury on direction from Mr. Justice Harry McKay.

The court had been told the three men each put up $900,000 to guarantee the loan and had been granted the right of first refusal in the event the club was sold.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said in an interview from Montreal, that if the conviction stands, "Scallen will have to resign as a governor" of the league.

But he said Scallen can remain as the team's principal owner.

Mr. Hall said he was working closely with other staff in hiring a new general manager to replace Bud Poile, who resigned last month for medical reasons.

'Old Arrangement' Stings Tigers

BILLY MARTIN
. . . old ways hurt

By The Associated Press

In a computerized society, baseball remains a nearly unique business where humans still operate and success or failure depends on men, not machines.

Detroit manager Billy Martin isn't so sure he likes that old fashioned arrangement.

Martin's Tigers suffered a 3-1 loss to Baltimore Orioles in 12 innings Wednesday and the box score tells you that designated hitter Tommy Davis doubled home the deciding run. Actually, Tiger left fielder Jim Northrup was responsible.

Northrup misjudged Davis' fly ball and it fell for two bases and brought home the winning run.

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday, New York Yankees beat Cleveland Indians 4-0, Oakland Athletics defeated Chicago White Sox 12-2, Kansas City Royals defeated Texas Rangers 9-6, and California Angels beat Minnesota Twins 4-1.

In the National League, New York Mets needed the clutch pitching of reliever Phil Hennigan to edge St. Louis Cardinals 5-4, Atlanta Braves defeated San Diego Padres 8-1, Cincinnati Reds downed Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 and San Francisco Giants nipped Houston Astros 5-4.

Martin spent some extra time in the shower before emerging to discuss Baltimore's winning hit.

"That ball was a routine fly," said Martin. "It was a human part of the game. Northrup just came in and the ball went over his head."

Northrup agreed.

"I didn't see the ball coming out of the infield," he said. "I started in, then went back. The turf gave way. I should have caught the ball though."

The Tigers, whose only run came on Norm Cash's second homer of the season, were leading 1-0 in the seventh when Davis singled home the tying run.

Then, in the 12th, Don Baylor doubled and dashed home with the deciding run as Northrup turned Davis' fly ball into another double. Merv Rettenmund's single delivered an insurance run.

Mel Stottlemyre's two-hitter for the Yankees beat the pitching of Cleveland ace Gaylord Perry.

New York battered Perry for 12 hits, three of them by Bobby Murcer, who managed only two hits all of last season against Perry.

Stottlemyre, who turned in his 37th career shutout, ended the Yankees' four-game start-of-season losing streak. He knew he would have to pitch well to do it.

"Against Perry," he said, "you'd better come close to a shutout or forget it."

Vida Blue spaced eight hits and Oakland used home runs by Joe Rudi, Sal Bando and Angel Mangual to defeat Chicago. It was the first victory for the world champion Athletics following three losses.

Mangual's homer, with two runners on base, came in a six-run eighth inning that clinched the victory for Oakland.

Blue was satisfied with his performance.

"My control was good and the ball did what I wanted it to do," he said. "My whole attitude this spring is getting back to my form of 1971 and I think I'm pitching myself into top shape."

John Mayberry ripped a three-run homer in the first inning, igniting Kansas City's victory over Texas. It was the fourth straight triumph of the young season for the Royals.

Nolan Ryan fired a five-hitter and struck out 11, pitching California to a 4-1 decision over Minnesota. Vada Pinson homered for the Angels.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

The chipping secret

London Club Hopes To Attract Best

LONDON (Reuter) — Crystal Palace, who are threatened with relegation from the first division of the English League, has made the first move in an attempt to get wayward Irish star George Best back into soccer.

Tommy Docherty, manager of Manchester United, which still has Best under contract, said today that Crystal Palace's manager Malcolm Allison spoke to him Wednesday night about the possibility of signing the 26-year-old international player.

"I told him that if he puts a request in writing, it will then go through the proper channels," Docherty said.

Best, who walked out on Manchester United four months ago and said he was retiring from soccer, has admitted recently that he would like to return to the game with a London club.

But even if Best signed for Crystal Palace he would be of no help to the southeast London club in their desperate relegation struggle, as under league rules, he could not play with the team until next season.

KIRKMAN VS. DROVER

SEATTLE (AP) — Boone Kirkman, who has knocked out two opponents since returning to the ring, is slated to meet Bill Drover, Canada's No. 2 heavyweight, in a 10-round boxing match here April 28.

Inflation Hits Sport of Kings

VANCOUVER (CP) — Galloping inflation is levying a princely ransom on the sport of kings.

Racetrack trainers preparing their charges for the opening of thoroughbred racing in Canada's west coast report that accelerating feed prices and rising wage levels are inflating the cost of owning a race horse.

"It's a bacon and eggs problem," said one Vancouver trainer. "We're being hit by the same factors which have forced up the price of eggs, bacon and beef."

Some trainers getting their horses ready for the April 25 opening of the Exhibition Park race season have raised their rates by as much as $2 daily to cover increased costs. Others are sticking to their old fees, usually $10 a day, but report rising feed prices are cutting into already slim profit margins.

Trainers say it now costs about $3 a day properly to feed a horse in training. An exercise boy charges $2 to gallop older horses and $3 for the more fractious two-year-olds. A qualified groom, who cares for an average of four horses, receives a minimum of $400 monthly, which works out to at least $3.25 per horse per day.

That totals $8.25 daily for an older horse. After throwing in incidentals such as tack, liniment, bandages and feed tubs, trainers report they are lucky if they have the price of a cup of coffee left from their $10 charge. Work done by veterinarians and blacksmiths comes out of the owner's pocket.

A trainer usually makes wages by grooming four or five horses himself. His bonus, as it were, comes from the standard 10 per cent trainer's share of any purse money won by his horses.

"If you're taking horses at $10 per day you better be sure you've got some stock that can run," said trainer R. P. (Cy) Perkins, who has some horses that can.

Bill Marsh reduces expenses by operating on the family plan. He and son Jim gallop their 18 horses between them and his wife and younger children take care of the grooming.

"A guy who comes here in a suit and has his help do all the work — I don't see how he does it," said Marsh.

The form chart on feed prices makes painful reading for trainers. Crushed oats, which sold for $87 a ton a year ago, now are $112. Straw at $69 a ton and hay at $87 are up $10 to $12 from last year.

Compounding a trainer's problems is an acute shortage of competent help, a complaint voiced regularly in almost every corner of affluent North America. Said one trainer:

"Just about any job you can name pays more than $400 a month and that's for five days a week. A groom works seven and gets up early.

"Now, not many young people in their right minds want to trade money for the so-called romance of racing, do they?"

Nicklaus In Top Spot

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus failed to win the Masters golf tournament but he regained his customary spot as the season's leading money winner.

Nicklaus collected $12,500 for his tie for third after the Masters' final round Monday and pushed his winnings for the season to $106,063.

Lee Trevino, the leader going into the tournament, dropped back to second with slightly more than $102,000.

Toronto Test For Arsenal

TORONTO (CP) — Arsenal of the English First Division, upset by Second-Division Sunderland in Saturday's FA Cup semi-final, will play Canada's national soccer team here May 23.

Arsenal, now a point behind Liverpool in the race for first place, will be paid $5,000 for the game plus 50 per cent of the return air fare from London.

Celtics Bounce Back

By The Associated Press

With Boston's top hockey team out of the playoff picture and Boston's basketball team down 54-46 at the half after losing two straight to the Atlanta Hawks in the National Basketball Association playoff series, there was the temptation to look at Boston's winter sports teams and say: "One down, one to go."

But that old cliche must have been blasphemy to the Celtics' John Havlicek. He scored 32 points, 20 after the intermission Wednesday night, to lead the Celtics to a 108-101 victory over the Hawks and in so doing turned the series and the cliche around.

The Celtics now have a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series and for them it's "three down, one to go."

In Wednesday's only other basketball action, Kentucky defeated Carolina 113-103 in the first game of their American Basketball Association Eastern Division finals.

Just like the National Hockey League Bruins, their cotenants at the Boston Garden, the Celtics were missing an important element in their attack. When the Bruins aren't skating they're losing. Likewise, when the Celtics aren't running they're in trouble.

In the first half the Celtics were in plenty of trouble. "We weren't running," said Havlicek, commenting on the first half in which Boston hit only 33 per cent of its shots. "In the second half we tried to create the same situation we had in our first two wins by doing more running and going with fewer set plays."

Pete Maravich totalled 34 points in a losing effort.

WEEKEND SKI REPORT

Although fair to good conditions exist on both Vancouver Island ski areas, it's beginning to look as if the season for carving tracks down a white mountainside are nearly over.

Forbidden Plateau reported a temperature of 36 degrees this morning under clear skies. There is no new snow and totals are 107 inches at the top of the chair lift and 11 at the bottom. This area will be operating weekends only starting next week.

Partly cloudy skies and a temperature of 34 degrees was the word from Green Mountain. Top total was 79 inches, bottom depth was 51 inches and no new snow has fallen.

Other Pacific Northwest reports:

GROUSE MOUNTAIN: Partly cloudy, unlimited visibility, 40 degrees, no new snow, operating 9 a.m. to midnight.

WHISTLER MOUNTAIN: Broken overcast, 35 degrees, no new snow, 116-inch alpine total, operating 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

HEMLOCK VALLEY: Overcast, unlimited visibility, 32 degrees, no new snow, operating 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

MT. SEYMOUR: Partly cloudy, 40 degrees, no new snow, operating 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. with night skiing on two ropes and one chair until 10 p.m.

MT. BAKER: Clear, 34 degrees, no new snow, 129-inch total, operating weekends only.

SNOQUALMIE PASS: Clear, 36 degrees, no new snow.

STEVEN'S PASS: Scattered cloud, 35 degrees, no new snow, 56-inch total.

CRYSTAL MOUNTAIN: Clear, 28 degrees, no new snow.

MT. PILCHUK: Partly cloudy, 35 degrees, no new snow.

MISSION RIDGE: Clear, 34 degrees, no new snow, 53-inch top total, 12-inch bottom total.

Wests Grab Jackson Cup

George Paul and Graham Kennedy scored Wednesday night to give Victoria West a 2-0 win over Duncan Village Green in the final of the Victoria and District Soccer League's Jackson Cup competition.

About 150 fans watched the defensive game at Royal Athletic Park.

Paul lofted a shot over the head of substitute goalkeeper Peter Wilson for the first goal at the 30-minute mark. Wilson stepped in to help the team out after Duncan's regular goalkeeper was injured in the District League playoff semi-finals a week earlier.

Kennedy got his goal on a hard drive at the 55-minute mark.

Wests' goalkeeper Peter Seilbolts had to make few difficult saves to earn his shutout.

Centre-half Tim Lord of Duncan was named the game's most valuable player.

The competition, open to clubs in all three divisions of the District League, attracted an entry of 16 teams.

Meanwhile, Oak Bay, which upset favored Cosmopolitan Royals in the semi-final a week ago, will be hoping for the same good form in Sunday's Vancouver Island Soccer League playoff final.

Bays take on University of Victoria Vikings at 2:15 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park. Vikings finished league play in a first-place tie with the Royals but took the title on goal average.

At the same time, playoff finals in all three divisions of the Victoria and District Soccer League will be going on at other parks.

London Boxing Club will play Victoria West in the first division final at Heywood Avenue Park.

In the second division, Saanich Braves will meet Labatts at Topaz Park, and in the third division, Longhorns play Royal Roads at Blanshard Field.

There will be no Pacific Coast League games in the city this weekend but both Victoria teams will be in action.

Victoria West-United will round out its schedule with a match against University of British Columbia Thunderbirds at UBC Saturday and, at the same time, Victoria Gorge Molsons will be playing Paul's Canadians at North Vancouver's Kinsmen Park. Gorge has a final game to make up against Burnaby Norburns of the Inter-City League.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Consistent accuracy paved way to victory circle for Gil Wong in 25th week of annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. Gil collected men's tenpin award as he rattled pins for sparkling 213-213-230—656 series in Friday Niters League at Mayfair Lanes.

Title at Stake

Island schools kick off the B.C. high school rugby championships at noon Friday in two separate games at Macdonald Park.

Oak Bay Bays play Rutland on one field while Cowichan takes on Kamloops on the other.

Bays get their second match of the preliminary round-robin section, in which the 11 schools are divided into groups of three, against Centennial of the Fraser Valley at 2 p.m.

Tournament director Ed Kubek of Claremont said today both Alberni High Scholo and the Cariboo representative, 100 Mile House, had pulled out of the competition.

Reynolds has stepped in for the Up-Island school but there will be no Mainland replacement for 100 Mile House, Kubek said.

Cowichan's second match is against Langley at 4 p.m.

Two other Island schools — Victoria High Titans and Reynolds — are in the same group and meet at 1 p.m.

Reynolds plays Princess Margaret of the Fraser Valley at 3 p.m.

The tourney shifts to Royal Athletic Park in the evening where Vic High plays Princes Margaret at 7 p.m. and Claremont and Delta meet at 8 p.m. Round-robin games are all of 25-minute halves.

Top team in each group enters the championship round semi-finals at 1 and 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park (30-minute halves) and the final (35-minute halves) will be played on the same field at 7 p.m.

Little Club Makes It

There weren't many boys to pick a team from, but Salt Spring Island is one of five Vancouver Island-area clubs through to the semi-finals of the B.C. Juvenile Soccer Association playoffs.

All Island sides will be in action this weekend in the playoffs which lead to the Soccer Tournament of Champions in Vancouver April 28 and 29.

Salt Spring Island, which managed to field a team from only 40 boys of juvenile age on the island, plays Vancouver Dunbar Stongs in a seventh division semi-final at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Salt Spring Island School.

Also through to the seventh division semi-finals is Victoria Gorge, which will play Burnaby Cliff Avenue United at 1 p.m. Saturday at Topaz Park.

Also on Saturday, Alberni Poulson and Prescott will play Vancouver Southern Slope Tejas in a sixth division game in Vancouver.

On Sunday, Victoria Boys' Club will bid for a berth in the first division final with a game against Cliff Avenue in Burnaby and Victoria Lakehill Kiwanis will play in the second division semi-finals against Westminster Blue Mountain Cewes in Coquitlam.

Blevins, Hansen Added to Lineup

Cheryl Blevins and Ulla Hansen, both of Victoria Mercuries, were added to the B.C. International team which will compete in the Orinda, Calif., invitational track and field meet on April 28.

The selections were announced Wednesday by the B.C. Track and Field Association.

Miss Blevins, 16, was picked in the 200- and 400-metre events while Miss Hansen, 14, was chosen for the 800 and 1,500-metre races.

The two join Victorians Bev Cox of Vancouver Olympic Club and Jill Pelland of Victoria Track Club as well as Gail Turney of Duncan's Ceevacs as Vancouver Island representatives in the meet.

Miss Turney was not on the provincial association's selection list but is a member of the University of British Columbia contingent which will take part in the competition.

The team leaves April 26 and will return April 30.

Medal Round

A monthly medal round for women golfers with a handicap of 15 or under will be held Monday at Uplands Golf Club with the following draw:

Australia Clinches Test Victory

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (Reuter) — Australia beat the West Indies by 10 wickets in the fourth cricket test Wednesday to gain an unbeatable 2-0 lead in the five-match series. Two matches were drawn.

The Australians took only 21 minutes to score 30 runs on the final day to clinch victory.

Ian Redpath made the winning hit, square cutting Rohan Kanhai for his sixth boundary.

Ridge Suit Settled By Chargers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former defensive tackle Houston Ridge will receive $260,000 in settlement of a $1.25-million suit against San Diego Chargers, his lawyer said Wednesday.

The award will be paid by Dr. E. Paul Woodward, team doctor of the National Football League team, attorney Robert Baxley indicated.

In his suit Ridge, who played for the Chargers from 1966 to 1968, claimed that drugs administered to him by Woodward allowed him to play while injured, aggravating a hip injury and shortening his playing career.

U.K. Golfers Tie for Lead

LA MANGA, Spain (AP) — England's Tony Jacklin fired a five-under-par 67 Wednesday to tie countryman Neil Coles for the first round lead in the $65,000 Spanish Open golf tournament.

One stroke back — at 68 — were Holland's Jan Dorrestein and Pedro Contreras of Spain, the home club pro.

Bunched at 69 were 1971 champion Dale Hayes of South Africa, Tinie Britz of South Africa, John Newton of Britain, Donald Swaelens of Belgium, Roberto Bernardini of Italy, John Garner of Britain and Paddy McGuirk of Ireland.

Celtic Reaches Final With Overtime Burst

LONDON (Reuter) — Holders Celtic slammed three goals in extra time to beat Dundee 3-0 in their Scottish Football Association Cup semi-final replay Wednesday and will meet Glasgow Rangers in the final on May 5.

Celtic, cup winners 22 times in 35 final appearances, played a goalless first game with Dundee on Saturday and there was still no score after 90 minutes Wednesday. But then Jimmy Johnstone scored twice and Kenny Dalgleish once to end Dundee's hopes.

In England, West Bromwich Albion, bottom of the First Division for most of the season, took another step away from the relegation zone by beating Everton 4-1 while Crystal Palace plunged deeper into trouble by losing 2-0 against Manchester United.

Cardiff City qualified to represent Wales in next season's European Cup Winners Cup by beating Bangor 5-0 to win the Welsh Cup final 5-1 on aggregate.

In Leeds, Allan Clarke scored a brilliant goal to give Leeds United a 1-0 win over Hajduk Split of Yugoslavia in the semi-final of the European soccer Cup of Cup winners — and later was sent off the field.

Clarke moved past three opponents to score his goal in the 20th minute.

In the 70th minute he aimed a kick at a Yugoslav player after being brought down and was sent off.

In Turin, Italy, Juventus of Turin, sparked by two goals from Brazilian veteran Jose Altafini, beat Derby County 3-1 in their first leg match for the semi-finals of the European Cup of Champions tournament.

Russians Rout Poles

MOSCOW (AP) — Captain Boris Mikhailov scored seven goals to lead undefeated Soviet Union in a 20-0 rout of Poland in the world hockey championship Wednesday.

It was the Soviet Union's eighth straight victory in its drive for the title and the hapless Poles went down to their eighth defeat in a row.

Czechoslovakia, the defending champion, downed West Germany 7-2 in an earlier game. It boosted the Czechs record to 5-1-2 while the Germans suffered their seventh loss against one triumph. Russia scored six goals in the first period, added five more in the second and then scored nine in the final period. The Russians now have outscored the opposition 90-12.

The Polish defence was almost non-existent and Soviet players roamed freely around the Polish goal scoring from every angle.

Polish goalkeeper Walery Kosyl was replaced by Henry Wojtynek after the first period, but he also was helpless against the Soviet attack. Vladimir Petrov scored five times against the Poles.

It was the worst beating the Russians have administered in the tournament, surpassing their 18-2 whipping of West Germany.

The Soviet Union concludes its schedule against two tough opponents in Czechoslovakia and second-place Sweden, with a 5-1-1 record.

Finland, the sixth team in the double round-robin tournament, has three wins and four defeats.

Card Features Battle Royal

All 12 grapplers involved in preliminary bouts will be in the ring for an over-the-top-rope "battle royal" tonight during a professional wrestling card in Memorial Arena.

In other bouts, starting at 8 p.m. The Brute tackles Dean Higuchi, Sean Regan meets Ray Blenn, Edie Morrow takes on John Quinn, Rocky Montero faces Eric Froelich, Pedro Sanchez tests Butts Giraud and Buck Ramstead goes against Mike Webster.

Budget Cuts Hit Grants, Public Works

Public works and grants to community organizations took the brunt of 1973 budget-cutting by Saanich council Wednesday, helping trim about two mills from the expected tax rate.

It was council's longest and most effective deliberation of three nights this week, lasting three-and-a-half hours, and resulting in about $200,000 in reduction of the estimates.

Just over $300,000 has been eliminated from the estimates of 1973 spending, equal to almost two mills, and bringing the anticipated rate increase this year to 3.69 mills. Another trimming session is set for tonight.

Before the community grants were considered, municipal administrator W. M. Tremayne calculated the $281,000 deletions to be worth 1.78 mills, leaving an increase in the rate at that point at 3.91 mills for a dollar increase of $41 on a taxable assessment of $11,000.

But the increase in Saanich sewer parcel tax this year will be about $20, treasurer Roy Broughton said.

Even if the mill rate increase were somehow eleminated, the sewer tax would wipe out the $15 higher homeowner grant for a net rise of $5.

However, it is expected the general tax rate will increase by at least 2.5 mills on the basis of what has been done in the three council sessions so far this week.

Members of council conflicted on the pricrity of some roads and drainage projects and on some grant applications, but agreed the total sought was too high.

Grant Requests Trimmed $22,830

The $116,380 sought by 57 groups was cut by $22,830 to $93,550, compared with $83,443 in 1972.

Biggest loser was the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, which asked for $16,205 and got $9,285, the same as last year.

Victoria Symphony Society was next, dropping $4,210 to $6,000, while the Victoria Conservatory was refused its $3,890 request.

The Maritime Museum also was cut out, having asked for $1,945.

Bastion Theatre was cut back $1,835 to its 1972 level of $4,000 and Community Action Group of Greater Victoria was refused a $1,400 request.

NEED, which operates a crisis telephone service, was given the 1972 equivalent, $1,825 instead of the requested $3,555.

Ald. Leslie Passmore led the attack on the Symphony, suggesting it is well supported by a number of grants including Local Initiatives Program. If it plans a series of school lunchtime concerts it should approach the school board for money, he said.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said the symphony must have support from a number of sources:

"I don't see how we can turn our back on this society. It has a conductor the envy of many larger cities . . ."

Major road undertakings taken out of the budget were $75,000 for rebuilding Tyndall between Kenmore and Feltham, $28,000 for Borden between McKenzie and Cedar Hill Cross Road, and $38,000 for the Saanich share of reconstructing Royal Oak Avenue as proposed by Broadmead Farms, which the council wants to reconsider next year.

Aldermen added $10,000 to expenditures for roads to cover contingencies for a total $118,500 for municipal roads. Three other projects worth $204,400 as the Saanich share would be done under cost-sharing with the provincial government as secondary highways.

Council also added $4,000 to the estimates for the Saanich share of Family Court division, making the local contribution $66,000. Ald. Edith Gunning objected to proposed reduction of court services despite the growing useage and the importance of the court as a social service.

Elimination of the supplementary half-time court as proposed by the senior court clerk for provincial court services would be "quite wrong," she said.

"I'm concerned about it. I don't want to see a backlog of cases — it sometimes means families have to go on welfare."

She charged that criminal court procedures and principles were influencing the family court: "I am angry about that."

The person administering family court should have training in the humanities and be well-versed in family law, she said.

Aldermen referred the matter to the Greater Victoria central court committee.

Cheaper To Pay Fine

Some logging companies would rather pay a fine for clogging a creek with debris than pay to clean it up, Mike Hill, secretary of the Save Our Salmon Committee, told the legislature's standing committee on forestry and fisheries on Wednesday.

"They would rather pay a $2,000 fine than $10,000 to clean up the river," he said.

"I have seen log jams on rivers three miles long."

The association, in a brief, recommended the establishment of a small separate government department to assume functions of pre-development planning for forest lands.

The department would also plan for all other significant wild land development such as power lines, highways, parks and railroads.

Hill said such a department should only be answerable to a minister or deputy and its "recommendations handled directly and not subject to the present inter-departmental procedures which tends to slow constructive policies."

He said pre-logging planning and careful execution of even single-use plans has been almost non-existent in British Columbia.

"External progress has been inhibited by the past political climate in the province, non-management of forest lands by the provincial forest service, who were content to act as salesmen and clerks rather than foresters, and the lack of concerned public," he said.

Hill said the province is faced with a "tremendous backlog of problem areas with a long logging history.

As the result of mismanagement, he said, many salmon-producing streams are in an extremely poor condition.

"We therefore strongly recommend the new planning department also examine past problems and recommend measures to restore fish populations to near historical levels of abundance," he added.

Hill said the association did not consider hatcheries and spawning channels as acceptable alternatives to the protection of salmon streams.

"We are aware the forest industry has often promoted hatcheries and spawning channels as alternatives to stream protection," he said.

"We have heard statements to the effect that it would be better economically to wipe out a series of small streams, difficult to protect, and replace their production with hatcheries or spawning channels," he added.

"This is ecologically unsound, and typical of single-concept thinkers."

Energy Act Approved

After an unexpectedly short debate, the legislature approved in principle Wednesday the controversial Energy Act, which will permit the government, through commission, regulate the prices of petroleum products in the province.

Debate on the bill took only three hours and was highlighted by a last-ditch attempt by the Social Credit party to have the bill put off for six months. The government quashed the move, however, by a 35-14 vote.

Approval in principle was given in a 35-15 vote, with all three opposition parties combining against the government.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald defended the legislation by saying something is needed to halt the price increases imposed by the oil monopoly operating in the province.

TOO MUCH POWER

But the opposition speakers said the government has proposed too much power for itself in the legislation and Ed Smith (SC-North Peace) moved that it be "hoisted" for six months to allow for further study.

Macdonald said the Energy Act is "a very simple little non-contentious piece of legislation."

He said it is a "bit of spring cleaning" by the government of the petroleum industry.

The province's supply of petroleum resources, particularly natural gas, he said, has been depleted by exports for too many years without the province getting an adequate return.

The purpose of the Energy Commission, he said, is to represent the province in national discussions, with such agencies as the National Energy Board, about the levels of export quantities and prices.

FAST POKER GAME

Macdonald said the B.C. taxpayer is an unwilling participant in a "very fast poker game, and is sitting in his undershirt holding a pair of deuces with only one draw to go. He'll be lucky not to go home in a barrel, an oil barrel."

The attorney-general said the government wants to sell its case to the National Energy Board for higher export prices for natural gas. The oil companies, he said, have created an artificial energy crisis by cutting back on exploration and development in order to increase prices.

He said the oil companies, in particular El Paso Natural Gas, which recently signed a large contract with a B.C. natural gas supplier, is "holding a gun to our heads" by offering to remove an extra charge on their product if the government approves further export licences.

EXPLOITATION

Macdonald said the government wants to curb the exploitation of service station operators who are forced by their companies to run costly promotional programs. Such action will lower the costs of gas to consumers, he said.

The government is also interested in equalizing the price of gas in the different parts of the province, he said.

Premier Barrett said during debate of the delay motion that the NDP government has inherited a "crisis situation" from the former government which will require swift action.

To delay implementation of the Energy Act for six months would mean that the government is condoning the low export prices being charged for B.C.'s resources, he said.

Barrett said B.C. is interested in getting a better return for its resources in the same manner that Alberta has moved to get a better return through its two-price policy for natural gas. He added that if there is one bill which should meet with the approval of the opposition parties, it is this one.

Macdonald said later, in winding up the debate, there is no doubt at all in his mind the petroleum industry is a monopoly.

Apparently replying to an observation by Conservative house leader Scott Wallace, that petroleum product prices haven't increased as much as many other commodities, he said he had seen too many examples of companies following price leadership to believe that came about through coincidence.

"When last January Imperial Oil raised its prices one cent a gallon, by that same odd coincidence all the other companies followed suit. We can't pretend it is accidental after 40 or 50 years of history in this province."

TRANSCRIPTS WENT TO A-G —McCORD

WASHINGTON (WP)—James McCord Jr. has testified before a U.S. federal grand jury that his principal superior in the Watergate conspiracy told him the transcripts of the wiretapped conversations of Democratic party officials were hand-carried to former Attorney-General John N. Mitchell, according to reliable sources.

The sources reported that McCord also testified that his superior in the conspiracy, former White House aide G. Gordon Liddy, told him Mitchell has ordered a "list of priorities" in establishing electronic eavesdropping operations against the Democrats.

McCord, according to the sources, said the first priority was to bug the Democratic national committee headquarters at the Watergate; then the campaign headquarters of Sen. George S. McGovern; and finally, rooms in the Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami to be occupied by presidential candidates and party officials at the Democratic national convention.

McCord, the former security co-ordinator of the committee for the re-election of the president, was reached by telephone Wednesday and confirmed the sources' account of his grand jury testimony.

Mitchell, through a spokesman at the re-election committee, denied that he ever received transcripts or logs of wiretapped conversations and denied once more that he had prior knowledge of any plans for illegal electronic eavesdropping.

★ ★ ★

In related developments Wednesday:

—Three principal figures in an alleged campaign of political espionage and sabotage conducted against the Democrats appeared before the same grand jury as McCord. They are former presidential appointments Secretary Dwight L. Chapin, former White House aide Gordon Strachan and alleged political saboteur Donald H. Segretti.

—Reliable investigative sources said that Mitchell and former commerce secretary Maurice H. Stans, the chief Nixon fund-raiser, appeared earlier this month before a federal grand jury in New York City investigating a $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon committee by Robert L. Vesco. Vesco is the central figure in a securities and exchange commission suit alleging that investors were swindled out of $224 million.

—Philip S. Hughes, head of the federal elections office in the General Accounting Office, said that an investigation of the Nixon campaign's finances will be expanded to include an apparent violation of the law in the disbursement of at least $70,000 in cash to Mitchell's closest aides. Reliable investigative sources have said the money came from the same fund that financed the Watergate bugging and was not properly reported under the new campaign finance disclosure law.

According to reliable accounts of McCord's appearance before the grand jury, he testified that Liddy showed him final typed transcripts of wiretapped conversations on several occasions and said these are for the (former) attorney-general." On at least one occasion, McCord reportedly testified, Liddy specifically told him that he regularly "hand-carried" the transcripts to Mitchell, who was then Nixon's campaign manager.

On another occasion, McCord reportedly testified, he saw Liddy's secretary, Sally Harmony, typing a final version of the transcripts from McCord's own preliminary draft. One source familiar with the testimony said Wednesday: "If those conversations were being retyped, it meant they had to be going somewhere; Liddy certainly didn't need to have them typed again for himself."

Ellsberg Tells of Burning Villages

LOS ANGELES (WP) — Daniel Ellsberg told the Pentagon Papers trial jury Wednesday how he became disillusioned with the U.S. effort in the Vietnam War after discovering "the very great divergence" between what American government officials and the public were told about it and what he personally observed in the Vietnamese countryside.

During a year-long state department assignment to the war zone in the mid-1960s, Ellsberg said, he found that South Vietnamese government troops were burning villages and American aid was being used to enrich local officials rather than aid the people.

On the basis of his observations, he said, he was at one point compelled to report to his superiors in the Saigon embassy and Washington that there was "no progress" in the U.S.-sponsored village pacification effort.

Upon completing a full morning of such testimony — and after U.S. District Court Judge W. Matt Byrne Jr. and the jury had already left the courtroom — Ellsberg returned to the defence table and broke into uncontrollable sobs.

Ellsberg and his co-defendant, Anthony J. Russo Jr., are charged with conspiracy, espionage and theft of government property as a result of their photocopying of the top-secret Pentagon Papers in the fall of 1969.

By afternoon, Ellsberg seemed calmer and had less trouble getting his statements into the court record.

Ellsberg recalled that in his early days as a defence department aide, he helped plan "overt operations against the North Vietnamese," including the capture and interrogation of fishermen and "clandestine bombing of the north" at a time when the United States denied it was conducting such bombing.

In later years, he testified, he sought to persuade policy-makers in Washington that they were not being "adequately and honestly" informed about such matters as "the extremely low level of performance" of the South Vietnamese army.

The court day ended just as Ellsberg was describing how he obtained special access to the Pentagon Papers at Rand's Washington office in March, 1969, seven months before he and Russo photocopied them at a Hollywood advertising agency.

N-Powered Pacemakers Implanted in 15 Patients

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — Heart patients who received nuclear-powered pacemakers were fit enough to play basketball after surgery, according to officials at Beth Israel Medical Centre.

Seven patients received the implants Tuesday — following eight such operations Monday — of the first American-made nuclear powered pacemakers.

All patients were reported in fine condition following the one-hour operations, and Dr. Victor Parsonnet, director of the surgery team, said more operations were planned.

"We wish we had more units," he said. "We're sure going to try to get some."

The historic operations were funded by the Atomic Energy Commission, which licensed the project at Beth Israel and at the National Heart and Lung Institute in Maryland.

The spokesman said some of the patients, though tired, were "driving nurses crazy — they're having so much fun."

Although there are no diet or activity restrictions on the patients, the spokesman said, they must remain at the hospital about six days. He said they could participate in any physical activities they desired.

Their heartbeats will be monitored at weekly intervals by special bracelets attached to a recording device which will send the necessary information over a telephone line to the medical centre. The patients must also have check-ups in person at four-month intervals.

Most of the patients used local anesthetic and stayed wide-awake during the surgery. As each operation was completed, the patient was wheeled into an auditorium to watch the subsequent operation.

Picasso Collection Donated

PARIS (AP) — Pablo Picasso's family announced today that it is giving the artist's immensely valuable collection of paintings by his contemporaries to the French nation.

The gift, announced by the family's Paris attorney, Roland Dumas, does not include the enormous collection of works by Picasso which the artist never sold.

Art dealers are fearful that the market value of Picasso's work will collapse if the family is forced to sell off a substantial number of these paintings to pay inheritance taxes on the rest of his large fortune.

The collection being given to the nation is in the villa at Mougins, on the French Riviera, where Picasso died April 8 at the age of 91.

It includes paintings by Matisse, Modigliani, Dufy, Braque, Rousseau and others, and most have never been seen by the public.

"They are pictures which he had purchased since the beginning of the century and are works of the greatest painters of the modern period," Dumas said.

He added that the only condition attached to the donation was that the pictures should hang together on exhibit in the Louvre.

Picasso's legitimate son, Paulo, confirmed that his father left no will. In addition to his widow, Jacqueline, and Paulo, the artist is survived by two illegitimate daughters and an illegitimate son, and a legal battle may have to be fought through the French courts to determine the division of the estate.

In La Jolla, Calif., Dr. Jonas Salk, husband of Picasso's former mistress, Francoise Gilot, says her two children by the artist have been barred from entering Picasso's home.

"The reason for the absence of any comment or reflection by Francoise Gilot on the death of Picasso is a continued refusal to allow her children, Claude and Paloma, who are now in the south of France, to enter their father's home at this moment of grief," Salk said Wednesday.

His statement appeared in today's edition of the San Diego Union.

Miss Gilot, a French artist, left Picasso in 1955 after 11 years and took their two children. She was married briefly to painter Luc-Remi Simon and in 1970 married Salk, discoverer of an anti-polio vaccine.

Elevator Shaft Fire Kills Four

CHICAGO (UPI) — Four workmen were killed Wednesday when a flash fire shot through an elevator shaft between the 33rd and 42nd floors of the Sears Tower, which when completed in a month will be the world's tallest building.

"When I heard the men screaming, I knew they would be dead because it has happened that way before on other jobs," said Michael D. Michele, a carpenter working on the 30th floor of the tower.

There apparently was no chance of escape for the victims because the marble-lined shaft was what construction men call a "blind hatch," meaning it had no exit at the bottom.

"We heard screaming from the elevator shaft and about 30 men broke through the wall with sledge hammers," Michele said. "It took us about 20 minutes."

Workmen who broke through the wall to get to the shaft found three charred bodies on the floor of the shaft on the 33rd floor. Another body was found on the 42nd floor level.

The dead were identified as Leonard Olsen, 44, Chicago; Robert Wiggins, 52, Park Ridge; William Walsh, 22, Melrose Park, and Larry Lucas, 20, Lincolnwood.

Lorimer Sees Housing Role for Gov't

By WAYNE HARDING
Times Staff

James Lorimer, the provincial cabinet minister responsible for housing, sees a small place for public housing on the landscape of British Columbia.

In an interview, the minister of municipal affairs stressed he does not believe government ownership and direct control are the answer to the housing problems of low income people.

LORIMER
. . . put brake on costs

But government intervention into private markets may be the answer. If successful, it will get people out of wholly-subsidized homes and keep them from having to go into them in the first place.

"Every Canadian has the right to adequate shelter. Obviously, therefore, the task of governments is to reduce or at least apply a constraint on the increase in cost of housing and I am confident that this can be done," he said.

How does he propose to accomplish this?

"Two major causes of increase in cost of housing are cost of money — mortgage interest rates — and cost of land. Governments can, as we intend to do, play an important role in these two fields.

"If, therefore, the government can reduce the cost of housing to the average person, there will be less need for 'public housing' as it has been known in the past."

What specific action will the B.C. government take?

"We intend to acquire and develop land to a considerable extent. By passing on the normal profits in land development, and by disposing of the land to individuals, by way of long-term leases, there will be a substantial saving — of perhaps 30 per cent — in the monthly payments.

"Developing and marketing the considerable amount of land already held by the Crown will also increase the supply of serviced lots.

"We intend to build houses — through proposal calls or tenders. These houses will be equal to, or better, than other housing in the community. By eliminating the usual sales commission, and by passing on the normal profit, there will again be a significant saving to the individual."

Who will get this housing?

"Initially demand will be greater than we can satisfy. The only fair way then, would be to draw lots from those who apply."

But certainly this won't do away with the need for public housing. Won't there always be such a need?

"If the increase in the cost of housing is greater than the increase in income then there will be greater demand and perhaps greater justification for government subsidies for housing . . .

"I do not think government has any obligation to provide housing for those who can afford it. I feel, though, there is a place for governments in the residential mortgage field and I can see justification — while the going mortgage interest rate is so high — for governments using profits from mortgage loans at going rates to provide lower rates for those who need them."

Why not simply give the money to the poor so that they can go out and buy the housing that suits them on the open market?

"While the supply of housing is so short — the vacancy rate in the Vancouver area is practically nil — your suggestion would create further pressure on the cost of housing.

"We come back to the point that the housing stock, mainly through more available serviced land — at reasonable cost — must be increased."

Public housing won't be completely done away with, but what are you going to do about the stigma attached to public housing projects?

"There is not much we can do about the stigma of existing public housing except that when the supply of housing is adequate we can gradually phase out the 'public' housing by renting some units at economic rent.

"In future we intend to provide scattered pubic housing which will not be identifiable by the general public.

"With provincial legislation to complement the proposed amendments to the National Housing Act, I believe that many people who would otherwise qualify for public housing would be able to own their own homes. There should of course be emphasis in this program to encourage additional new housing."

What about federal involvement in B.C.?

"Traditionally the federal government has played a major role in housing and while they do, it is my intention that British Columbia will use federal funds available. In the last 10 years British Columbia used only $47 million of federal funds, whereas, for example, Ontario used $700 million.

"In addition, much of the federal contribution is by loan and in fact, the federal government through CMHC acts as a banker.

"I foresee the continuation of the trend for the provinces and certainly this province to play an increasing role in the field of housing."

Voter Support Rises for NDP

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Early months of the Trudeau minority governmen dropped the level of Conservative support by six percentage points, raised the NDP by four points and the Liberals by one point.

Based on interviewing in the first week of March, Liberals stood at 40 per cent of the popualr vote; PCs at 30 per cent; the NDP at 20 per cent and other parties at 10 per cent.

Conservative losses were found in Quebec, Ontario and the West. Liberals lost some strength in Quebec, but gained in Ontario and the West. The NDP gained slightly in all three regions. In the Maritimes, party strengths remained stable.

Nationally, 31 per cent of the voters are undecided, a normal figure between elections.

The study was conducted with a random sample of 713 adults in personal, at-home interviews. A sample of this size is accurate within a four percentage-point-margin of error.

The question:

"If a federal election were held today, which party's candidate do you think you would favor?"

The following table shows the party standings, reported in February and today, compared with the election results, among those who named a party.

Car Insurance Bill Approved

By BRIAN BUTTERS and PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The legislature approved in principle Wednesday a bill establishing the Insurance Corporation of B.C. — the crown corporation which will supply auto and other forms of insurance to residents of the province.

Alll three opposition parties opposed the legislation in a divided vote. The NDP government squashed the dissenters by a vote of 31-15.

Critics said the insurance bill grants excessive powers to the government to require even ordinary citizens to buy their insurance from the government corporation.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the insurance corporation will be a "Rube Goldberg machine," which he described as a device that has all its parts moving together but does not succeed in getting any work done.

He said there is power under the legislation for the government to appoint up to four of its members to the board of directors of the corporation. And the corporaton, Williams said, will have access to borrowed money from the public treasury, a privilege not available to competing insurance companies.

Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) said it is the intention of the government to "marry" the insurance corporation with the one in operation in Manitoba. To do so would be a "sell-out" of provincial funds, she said, since B.C. could end up subsidizing Manitoba's car insurance plan.

Jordan described the insurance bill as "the old NDP squeeze play."

She said Highways Minister Bob Strachan, who has piloted the legislation through the house, "has always had a hankering for power, and in doing so is snatching rights away from the citizens."

Jordan said the insurance corporation will be "not only a white elephant hanging from the people's necks, but a gargantuan white elephant . . . no, it should be a red elephant and the people of B.C. don't believe in red elephants."

Public Works Minister Bill Hartley, a persistent critic of the previous government's policy toward auto insurance, said the insurance legislation will enable people to buy their insurance at cost, from a wholly-owned B.C. company, and will see their money invested in British Columbia projects.

He said it will be "one of the first steps where B.C. will be able to repatriate its own economy."

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace River) charged that neither the legislature nor the people of B.C. will ever know whether the corporation makes or loses money, because of the input it will have from other government services.

He predicted, too, that within two years all competition in every aspect of the insurance field will have been eliminated, because that is the government's "gluttonous approach."

"No one in British Columbia is safe from the power the government has taken unto itself in this session of the legislature. It's incredible," he said. "It has the power to confiscate, to commandeer — all without compensation."

In replying to the debate, Strachan denied Williams' charge that even ordinary citizens would be forced to buy their insurance from the ICBC, saying that was typical of the misinformed statements from opposition members which proved they hadn't really read the bill.

The wording of the appropriate section clearly limits the requirement to corporations, municipalities, associations, boards, commissions or societies, he said.

Strachan also denied allegations that the government is out to destroy competition in all segments of the insurance field.

"The insurance companies have said they want competition and we are going to give them competition," he said.

In turn, he accused opposition parties of acting as "defenders of the major corporations" with headquarters in the U.S. "They seem to be saying the companies have to be protected from somethng called the people, and the rights of the people to go into business."

★ ★ ★

To a barrage of opposition heckling, the minister claimed that the attacks on the legislation were seeking to destroy the "rapport" he had established with the insurance agents of the province.

"You don't want this to work . . . you will do everything in your power to prevent it from working," he added.

Strachan gave an assurance that every cent spent on the corporation will be charged to it and not funnelled off to some other government agency for the purposes of disguising the true cost of the operation.

He concluded by challenging the opposition parties to state that in the next provincial election they would pledge themselves to repeal the legislation.

Only a few hours after the bill received second reading, Strachan introduced amendments which, he told reporters, spell out clearly that a close check and accounting control will be maintained with regard to the insurance corporation's operations.

As it now stands, the bill requires the minister of finance to ensure that the corporation's books are kept in good order and states that the comptroller-general must submit a report as to their accuracy.

The amendments stipulate the books and accounts of the corporation be audited from time to time and at least once a year by the comptroller-general.

Strachan said the amended provision will be an assurance to the legislature and the people of the province that they will be informed of the corporation's "operations, successes and failures, if any"; that the corporation's books are kept separately from any other government agency and do not attempt to disguise some form of subsidy.

CREDIT REPORT ACTION COMING

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald agreed Wednesday with a Liberal MLA that stronger legislation is needed to regulate the practice of credit reporting in B.C., and indicated the government intends to take action at a later session.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound), speaking in the legislature during second reading debate on a bill which would protect debtors from harassment by debt collection agencies, expressed disappointment that legislation doesn't limit more rigorously the activities of those engaged in credit reporting.

The minimum protection that must be given to persons whose credit is being reported on is the legislative requirement that they be given copies of the credit information, he said.

Williams said there had been many cases where a person's indebtedness has been fully cleared up but, for various reasons, that information hasn't got back to the agency with the result that it continues to give out a bad rating.

The Debt Collection Act, given second reading by the legislature, incorporates some major recommendations of the Law Reform Commission of British Columbia in toughening up the regulations for licensing and control of debt collection agents.

One of its provisions states that no person who collects or demands payment of a debt, or repossesses or seizes goods, or evicts anyone from property, shall exert "undue excessive or unreasonable pressure" on a debtor or any member of his family or household.

Run-Offs Below Normal

Spring and summer run-off on streams and rivers in southern British Columbia will be below average this year, the water resources service said Wednesday in its monthly snow survey bulletin.

Run-off in the Similkameen district is forecast at well below average. The bulletin said the district has a snowpack on the mountains 70 per cent of normal years.

Below-average run-offs will occur on streams i.. the Okanagan, Kettle Valley, South Thompson and Kootenay districts. Average to slightly below average water flow is expected on the Fraser, North Thompson, Columbia and Coast river systems.

The Nechako, Skeena and Peace Rivers should have above-average runoffs during the April-September period. The Skeena watershed, with the present snowpack and lack of reservoir storage, is the only one with potential for high river levels, it added.

Chabot to Sue Hartley Over Hotel Statements

Socred James Chabot Wednesday said he instructed his solicitor to "take immediate legal action" against Public Works Minister Bill Hartley.

"This attack on my personal integrity cannot be tolerated, especially by a man who has been in public office for 10 years, Chabot said of Hartley.

He was referring to remarks made by Hartley in connection with the governmen takeover of the Glenshiel Hotel on Douglas.

Hartley, who denied charges the government paid more than the fair market price for the hotel, said Chabot had "given "misinformation" to the house in claiming the Glenshiel was offered to the government last year for $470,000.

That offer, Hartley said had been made by the National Trust Company, not last year as the Socred MLA had alleged, but in July, 1969 nearly four years ago.

The offer was rejected at the time by the Socred government, Hartley added, as he filed the relevant correspondence between the public works department and Victoria realtor John A. Relling.

After Premier Dave Barrett had shouted across to the Socred benches that Chabot had been "misleading the house," Hartley said when the $470,000 sale offer was made in 1969 the hotel had only 45 suites. It had since been refurbished and extended to 75 suites, with an attendant increase in value.

Hartley repeated earlier statements that the deal was concluded late last year after the government received two separate appraisals, but that he wasn't prepared to reveal the actual price paid at this time.

When he first raised the matter in the house April 3, Chabot quoted from a National Trust brochure offering the Glenshiel for sale for $470,000. He later told reporters the brochure had been circulated last summer.

Chabot accused the government of having "squandered" $110,000 of public funds in purchasing the hotel, becaue in Land Registry records its declared value was shown as $580,000, indicating that was the sum paid by the government.

The material filed by Hartley in the house included in addition to the correspondence he mentioned, a prepared statement in which he charged the Socred MLA with a "deliberate attempt to mislead the members of this legislature and the people of British Columbia."

Although the verbal statement made by the minister didn't include that allegation, sources in the clerks' office later confirmed the fact the material had been filed in the house imparted to it the same legal privilege which is traditionally enjoyed by MLAs in their speeches in the legislature.

'Tight Money Turner' Under Fire

OTTAWA (FP) — "Tight Money Turner" was the tag attached to Finance Minister John Turner in the Commons Wednesday.

For the third successive day the finance minister was under attack in the House for the announcement of the Bank of Canada raising the bank rate last weekend. It was denounced as an inflationary move by opposition members.

George Hees (PC — Prince Edward Hastings) said the action of the Bank of Canada has started a general movement toward the tightening of credit throughout the whole economy.

He asked the minister to review the action of the central bank at the earliest opportunity and to make a statement to the house on the economic goals and policies that the Liberal minority government is following.

'EXPANSIONARY' MOVE

Turner again defended the action of the governor of the Bank of Canada, Gerald Bouey. He said the governor had made it clear that in raising the bank rate the monetary policy of the bank and the country remains "expansionary."

Hees said: "Does the minister intend to try to convey to the House that he believes rising interest rates do not tighten up credit and that this does not constitute a tight money policy in effect and in action?"

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux attempted to call on another member to ask a question when Turner made no attempt to answer Hees' question.

"Could we have an answer to that very important economic question?" asked Hees. Turner still did not rise to reply.

"Tight Money Turner: Tight Money Turner:" jibed Hees.

Other members in the official opposition took up the chant of "Tight Money Turner."

"Well what about it, Turner? Here we go again with Tight Money Turner," shouted Hees.

"Horse Feathers Hees," retorted National Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said that the minister of finance had informed the House that the change in the bank rate would not be reflected in mortgage rates or in the interst rates structure generally. He pointed out that immediately following the increase in the bank rate the price of long term bonds fell, meaning that long term interest rates went up immediately. He asked if the minister had noted this?

MORE PAROLE URGED

OTTAWA (CP) — The attention of the public and mass media on "a few celebrated cases of parole failures . . . gives the parole board a black eye and turns the power brake on the whole parole system," a 53-year-old former-convict told the Senate legal affairs committee Tuesday.

John Smerciak, a Toronto tool designer who has been on parole for three years, said current public pressure for a tighter system of parole would see him in prison today.

"Instead, I own my own home . . . I pay taxes to keep these people in prison . . . And here I am . . . a completely rehabilitated and mighty happy man.

"Instead of magnifving the successes they've been magnifving the failures."

Prisons contained basically bad people, he said, "but they still have potential" to be incorporated back into society.

Smerciak, whose criminal record dates from 1935 and who has been imprisoned for crimes ranging from petty shoplifting to rape, appeared before the committee examining the parole system with two other ex-convicts.

He admitted there were a number of so-called incorrigibles among prisoners.

"But a man has no business being in jail if he's a mental case—he should be in a mental institution. If you do that all people in jail are capable of being rehabilitated."

Edward Elliott, 36, a one-time offender now on parole, said there was a need for a personal assessment of the prisoner by someone outside the prison staff.

The primary objective of the prison staff, he said, is to maintain prison security, not to consider how a man could be let out.

Commons Backlog Delays Debate on New Drug Laws

OTTAWA (FP) — Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde's planned new legislation for cannabis and other drugs now may not see the light of the Commons until this fall, if at all.

Lalonde, in an interview outside the Commons, said he does not "feel very pressed" about introducing the legislative changes to remove cannabis from the stringent Narcotics Control Act and thereby reduce cannabis penalties, as the government promised in its cannabis policy last summer.

And the health minister explained that even after the legislative changes are drafted, most likely by May or June, there is the problem of finding legislative time in the Commons.

To add to the uncertainty, the minister admitted that no one in Ottawa really knows how long this session will last and when an election might intervene.

If an election is called for this summer or fall, it would almost certainly doom any cannabis legislative changes, which continue to rate a low priority from the Liberal government.

The legislative changes and the resulting reduction in penalties were promised last summer and were in fact supposed to be introduced in Parliament last fall. Thus, they have already been delayed more than half a year.

The most important change proposed by Ottawa would be the elimination of jail sentences for first-time cannabis possession offenders. Other penalties would also be reduced.

The latest drug conviction statistics from Ottawa reveal that the trend of the last few years towards less stringent penalties for cannabis offences continues in most Canadian courts — but not all courts.

It is the exceptions that some experts feel make the cannabis legislative changes still a necessity.

Lalonde has said publicly that he personally prefers the creation of a new drugs act, as opposed to merely transferring cannabis to the existing food and drugs act. The health minister has also suggested that such a new drugs act would be designed to cover drugs other than just cannabis. He has mentioned specifically "speed" and even heroin.

rotary mowers

It's the way these mowers are designed that makes the big difference. Blade has high lift design that draws the grass up for a more even cut. Specially contoured housing creates a wind tunnel effect that quickly discharges clippings. This eliminates churning and ragged cutting — results in a clean, crisp-cut lawn.

All Gilson rotary mowers have an impact-resistant steel housing, easy pushing loop handle with safety latch, simplified controls, dependable Briggs & Stratton engine with Easy-Spin,® Kool-Bore design. Big 8' x 1.75 wheels mean easy operation. Grass catcher available for all models.

Now Shell takes the confusion out of tire buying with a top-quality belted tire that's right for almost all cars - and the price is right too!

Shell X-100 tires are so good they're backed up with a 30-day free trial offer from the Shell station where you buy them, and are guaranteed by Shell.

The belted X-100 tire sells for $27.95 to $33.95, depending on the size your car needs. And that price includes both installation and whitewalls.

For small, light cars that don't require a belted tire, there's an X-100 4-ply polyester tire that sells from $21.95 to $23.95. Same 30-day trial offer, same guarantee, same free installation and whitewalls.

It's that simple.

Shell X-100 tires easily exceed all Canadian government safety specifications, are guaranteed by Shell, and are available only at Shell stations throughout Canada.

Desks, Timetable, Boredom Thrown Out of Classroom

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Remember what it was like in grade school?

How everybody and everything had to fit an immutable timetable.

Students knew that every school day from September through June they would study mathematics at exactly 9 a.m. Art — always the last period — was usually cancelled because somebody talked.

Children used to pray for a fire drill — the only break allowed in their boring routine.

Children in grade 2 at Lakehill Elementary have been lucky enough to escape the rigid, timetable approach to education.

There are no desks, no timetable and no bored children. The classroom contains strategically placed work tables, two overstuffed couches, rugs, and a dozen soft cushions for sitting on the floor. It also contains 64 seven-year-olds who work where and when they want at whatever subject interests them at the moment.

And although talking is taken for granted, the noise level seems lower than around the average dinner table.

Thursday afternoon at least a dozen different activities were underway. Children make sculptures of spaghetti, painted, worked by themselves on mathematics and language arts or headed for the library to research a project. Two efficient little girls cleaned out the guinea pig's box and a boy shut himself in the play house to draw airplanes.

They all looked happy, relaxed and industrious.

The miracle workers involved are two experienced teachers, Donna Woolliams and Hermione Frey. They believe education should be "child centred" with each student taught when he is ready to learn.

Their system, called the integrated day, means children cover the regular curriculum at their own individual speeds. Children ask for help when they need it and aren't forced to listen to teachers explain something they already understand.

Every morning a teacher writes the day's "contract" (the work to be covered) on the board. Students know this work must be done, but their teachers don't care when or where they do it.

There is little formal instruction. Each child's progress is checked daily and new concepts are taught individually when the student is ready.

Each child also has a weekly conference with a teacher when workbooks are inspected. "We make sure they have a balanced week," Woolliams said.

Although the children work so well on their own, their teachers put in a hard day's work. There is a constant parade of children displaying work or asking for help. One little blonde turns up at regular intervals to hug Ms. Woolliams.

Buddy System

The "buddy system" is also used — where classmates pair to help each other, and also with older students from the high school who visit regularly.

Teachers keep daily records of each child's work and note incidents that help evaluate progress. They believe that if teachers "leave the children alone" they will learn what they need to know when they are ready.

For example, when a child feels like doing language arts, he takes a job card outlining the required work.

The teachers at first handed out cards varying in difficulty according to the ability of the child, but have found that students automatically choose a card at the right level on their own.

Both teachers have a calm, loving manner and the ability to spot trouble brewing and stop it before it starts.

Children aren't told simply to stop doing something. They are asked to think of the affect of their behavior on others.

Thought Elicited

Ms. Woolliams, for example, asked one lively seven-year-old what he thought of his behavior.

"Would you like someone distracting and bothering you when you are trying to concentrate?" she asked.

Her message got through. The student settled down on a couch and drew horses for the half hour remaining in the school day.

"We have spent a lot of time establishing an atmosphere of co-operation," Ms. Woolliams said.

Even dismissal time in this grade 2 is more fun than in the average classroom.

Ms. Woolliams praised the class for walking quietly at lunch time when some of the "older children" had been running and yelling.

Then Ms. Frey dismissed "everyone with a front tooth missing." That took care of about 20 students. They were followed in turn by groups with warts on their feet, new haircuts, freckles, and curly hair.

In Victoria, the Lakehill classroom's use of the integrated day technique is centred on individual learning in an open area — possibly to a greater extent than most other such classrooms in the area.

In Vancouver last week, the two teachers paid a visit to several schools in order to observe the same type of learning operations.

"We were very impressed with the vitality of the movement," said Ms. Frey. "I'm quite sure it will grow here, too."

ALWAYS TIME for a hug, Ms. Woolliams comforts Student Cathie Newman during break in activity at Lake Hill elementary. Teachers Woolliams and Frey both instruct with a calm, loving manner. They also have the ability to spot trouble brewing in the classroom before it starts — and stop it, too.

DAY'S WORK included portrait of Lakehill school principal Leonard Lane by student Maxwell Ngai. Teachers believe that if left alone, children will learn what they need to know, when they are ready to do so.

Creamed Salmon, Cream Puff Dough Delicious Fare for Lenten Observers

By MARY MOORE

This is an easy pie to make — if indeed it can be called a pie. The French name for it is Salmon Gougere. The pastry is choux paste (like cream puff dough) and the filling is creamed salmon. The combination is delicious for any dinner or party and will be welcomed by fish lovers and lenten observers.

SALMON GOUGERE
(Serves 5)

Filling:
1 15½-oz. can salmon (or two 7¾-oz.)
3 tbsp. butter
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk (include liquid from salmon to make 2 cups in all)
1 tsp. dill weed or seed
Pastry: Choux Paste)
½ cup boiling water
¼ cup butter
½ cup all-purpose flour
shake of salt
2 eggs

To make the Filling drain and mash salmon, reserving liquid. In a pot melt butter and blend in flour. Stir in milk combined with salmon liquid until thick. Add salmon and dill weed or seed. Set aside.

To make the Choux Paste in a medium pot bring to boil ½ cup water. Immediately add butter and stir to melt. Now add flour and salt all at once and stir hard until the paste leaves sides of pan and forms a ball — about 1 minute. Remove from heat — let cool a minute, then add eggs, one at a time, mixing well between additions.

Butter the bottom only of a deep nine-inch pie plate. Turn about half of creamed salmon into centre. Now make a circle of the paste to form a border. The paste wants to slump so push some of the filling against it to make it hold up against the sides. Reserve a little paste for dotting top. Add all of remaining filling. Dot top with little mounds of paste. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 40 minutes or until paste is well puffed and tinged with gold and filling is bubbly.

This serves five if you have at least two colourful vegetables. We serve broccoli and baked squash with it.

Something new to add to your fish file.

Salmon gougere—a pie that is not a pie

Service Unites Families

TORONTO (CP) — Almost 200 families here will be eternally grateful to Ed Gale, a man they must regard as somewhat of a miracle worker.

Gale, director of the immigration department of the Catholic Family Services here, was responsible during the last year for reuniting 188 families with their breadwinners who were living in Toronto.

He approved applications for 639 interest-free travel loans to bring relatives of breadwinners from distant locations, including Korea, Ecuador, Bulgaria, Ceylon, China, Egypt, Cuba, Greece, Turkey and Pakistan.

Money for the service run here by Gale comes from the International Catholic Migration Commission in Geneva, Switzerland. The fund is supported by Roman Catholics throughout the world.

Working for Things

DEAR ABBY: I have several very wealthy ladies for whom I work regularly. I go to their homes to perform a personal service.

One of my ladies is not only rich, she is also quite famous. When it comes time for her to pay me, she will bring out a used evening bag, or a pair of shoes, or a hat, or some piece of wearing apparel, and try to make some kind of deal with me in exchange for my services.

Abby, we know that all of her things were very expensive when they were new, but I have no use for such elegant articles, and besides, I work because I need the money.

How can I let her know that I wish she would simply pay me and not subject me to the embrarrassment of having to say I cannot use her second-hand things? — TIMID

DEAR TIMID: Tell her that you can't afford to work for "things" because you must have CASH to pay your bills.

DEAR ABBY: Sorry, but I disagree with you as to the impropriety of a student selling his class notes. I'd consider these notes as similar to a reference book.

When I attended medical school, each fraternity had an extensive file of old exam questions and class notes which went back years and were used extensively by the students. I am sure these contributed greatly to the learning process.

Since I have three college degrees with 11 years of college, and later taught for seven years in medical schools, I believe I am well qualified to express an opinion on this subject. — EDWARD S. CARDWELL, JR., M.D.

DEAR DR. CARDWELL: Ten whacks for me with any one of your old rolled-up diplomas. I rarely argue with authority.

DEAR ABBY: I shall be 77 years of age when I graduate from college at the end of this semester.

Frankly, I am not a gift-giver, neither do I appreciate gifts, which presents a problem. How do I invite people to my graduation without being "bothered" by a gift, and the annoyance of acknowledging receipt?

I am just happy to have my friends attend such an occasion, and that is all. — NAMELESS, PLEASE.

DEAR NAMELESS: On each invitation you could add, "Positively no gifts, please." But be prepared to have your request ignored by some.

DEAR ABBY: When an unmarried woman is asked by rude and insensitive women, "How come a gal like you isn't married? tell her to come back with, "How come a gal like you IS married?" — "Same Boat"

Tax Time Tale

Dear Children:

I want you both to pay attention and stop hitting each other with the good croquet mallets. I am going to tell you a story called Daddy and the Income Tax. No, it is not like Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. It is a true story, like the one I told you about How Babies are Born. No, I am not pregnant again! Now pay attention.

Tonight during dinner, Daddy is going to tell you that he is going to figure out his income tax tonight. From then on, you must both be quiet as mice. Do not put two carrot sticks under your upper lip and do your walrus impression, unless you want to be sent straight to bed and miss all the fun.

Right after dinner, Mommy will fix Daddy a big glass of iced tea. No, you may not have a sip. It is Daddy's Special tea.

Daddy will get out a big stack of doctor and dentist bills. There are bills for the tetanus shots you had when Jimmy bit you, bills for all that pink-eye ointment, and receipts for all those pills for Daddy's hypertension. In the middle, where nobody will see it maybe, is a bill for the dog's distemper shot.

Daddy will add up all the bills three times and get three different answers. Daddy is smart about things like the Balance of Payments Deficit and the Current Monetary Crisis, but he always forgets to carry the one. Mommy will fix him another strong glass of tea and add the bills for him. Mommy doesn't understand the Balance of Payments Deficit or the Current Monetary Crisis, but she is a whiz at carrying ones.

You may hear Daddy talk about exemptions. That is you. And because Daddy has both of you he does not pay taxes on $600 of his income. Having you saves Daddy about $175 a year. Or it would, if you didn't eat.

Don't be silly. If you asked him, Daddy would say he wouldn't trade you for a million dollars. Of course you can ask him. Tomorrow.

Butterball Tag Hit

CLEVELAND (AP) — Armour Co. of Phoenix, Ariz., has charged that another large packer, Swift and Co. of Chicago, uses misleading advertising to sell its Butterball turkeys.

Armour's suit in U.S. District Court here charges that the Butterball turkeys actually contain only coconut and soybean oils even though the turkey's wrappers display a stick of butter and a butter-colored symbol.

Swift officials were not available for immediate comment.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Friday, April 13

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What you would like to do and what you can do may be in temporary conflict. Key is to attend to basics. Review health, work procedures. Avoid unnecessary brooding. You are on brink of learning experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You break through in area previously blocked. You are able to negotiate differences with member of opposite sex. Humor plays important role. Laugh at your own foibles. Social gathering is likely to be on agenda.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lie low. Go slow. Be thorough. Be aware of fine points, details, what is contained between the lines. Your security is at stake. Don't permit irresponsible person to rush you, push you, cajole you or unduly influence you in any way. Be grown-up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message. What you think is essential may merely be a whim. Know it and begin studying alternatives. Open lines of communication. Do more reading. Become aware of what is happening where competition is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Domestic environment tends now to dominate. Luxury item could be subject of pro-and-con discussion with regard to possible purchase. Emotional response of one close to you is of special concern. Relax.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You could be entangled in legal web if careless. Don't jump to conclusions regarding property ownership, rights. Avoid premature actions or you could be cited for trespassing. Pisces plays prominent role.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Way is open to make your bid for more funds, responsibility — also, you can. Intensity important relationship. Your ability to collect, to utilize material at hand is emphasized. Prestige is on upswing.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Cycle is such that contacts made now can flourish. Be receptive. Keep clear head, however, where finances are concerned. Tendency is to leave project before it is finished. This could be a costly procedure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give full play to creative imagination. The sky can be limit if you permit your intuition to flow. Maintain aura of glamor. Don't tell all. Mystery works as asset for you. Act in discreet manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain valid hint from Sagittarius message. Tread slowly. Make real progress, step by step. Trying to skip essentials now would be an error. Special partnership, co-operative effort is featured. You make ultimate gains.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Strive for practical approach to money situation. Playing games with reality results in financial loss. Expand horizons without being extravagant. Sagittarian is likely to be featured.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What appears a "sure thing" may in actuality be elusive. Tearing down process may be necessary in order to rebuild. One in position of authority is not empowered to grant special request. Wait.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are direct, often blunt, an individual who adheres basically to the truth. This year you find that new projects, contacts are favorable. July should be an outstanding month. You have chance to begin anew by rectifying past errors. Creative excitement is featured.

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

How often have you been aboard an airplane and wished you knew how to take good pictures of some unique feature of the airport or its surroundings?

The four-page leaflet Taking Pictures From Airliners describes how you, too, can successfully photograph from a plane, irrespective of the type of camera you use.

First of all, choose a suitable seat. The best seat for picture taking is next to a window, in front or behind the wing and on the side that will be shady during the trip. The stewardess can tell you which side this is.

Don't let the camera touch the window and don't touch any part of the plane, otherwise you may get blurred pictures.

The leaflet also tells you how to adjust your shutter speed, focus and lens opening for in-flight pictures. At low altitudes use the same f-number as you would on the ground. At high altitudes use one stop less.

If you want to make movies during your plane trip, if your camera permits, adjust the speed. During takeoff and landing set it at 24-32 frames per second; on the ground and at high altitudes use the normal 16-18 frames per second.

Emergence of Working Woman Dooms Traditional Market Pitch

By SANDRA INGALSBE

TORONTO (CP) — Some advertising market researchers say the emergence of the working woman in Canada will be the most important marketing factor in the 1970s. They warn that advertisers have to evaluate their traditional selling appeals to women.

Women are the largest influx of any group into the Canadian labor force and account for about one-third of the total work force. More than 35 per cent of all women of working age hold jobs.

Many women who do not work are spending more time outside the home in volunteer or educational pursuits. All this leads researchers to believe that women — estimated to dispense 85 per cent of household income — are becoming more sophisticated in their buying decisions.

Advertising agencies say they have come a long way in the last few years to upgrade advertising directed at women. Feminists tend to agree, but add that there is still a lot more to be done.

Clara Quinn, a group media supervisor and former media director with McCann-Erickson Advertising of Canada Ltd., said:

"The lib movement has forcefully brought feminine affluence to the attention of all people involved with advertising. Women have been portrayed as foolish, but this type of advertising is being eliminated or toned down."

J. M. Reeve, president of the same agency and of the Institute of Canadian Advertisers, agreed that advertisers have taken note of female spending power and in some cases are de-sexing the approach in selling products where both men and women are likely to be making the buying decisions.

"Unrelated sex appeal is on the decline," he said. "It really doesn't make much sense to show a beautiful woman on the fender of a car."

Women are beginning to react, sometimes dramatically, to advertising they consider insulting. Recently, a Toronto firm had to remove from subway cars some of its advertisements depicting bikini-clad women.

The poster-size cards promoting a contest, were being defaced, stolen and plastered with "This ad exploits women" stickers. Jo Penney, one of the models, said, however, that she doesn't feel exploited and that the wardrobe was suitable to the advertising copy.

One Toronto women's group concerned about the quality of advertising is studying television commercials to determine how women are portrayed in terms of task performed, ethnic background and occupation.

The group was formed through an announcement in the newsletter of Women's Place, a referral and resource centre. Its members include those who are or have been associated with advertising as well as interested women.

Alice Courtney, a professor of marketing at York University, said:

"Each of us in the group had a personal feeling that some advertising was insulting to women. The first thing we found was a change. Very little advertising was overtly insulting but there were subtle things, such as women always being shown in the kitchen or in menial tasks."

Jo and subway ads

Jane House, another member of the group, said that in ads where women do have jobs, they are still seen primarily as housewives.

She referred to a study of more than 1,200 commercials carried out by the National Organization of Women (N.O.W.) in the U.S. which found that almost all ads in which women appeared showed them inside the home.

The study said that in 42.6 per cent of the commercials, women were involved in household tasks, in 37.5 per cent they were domestic adjuncts to men and in 16.7 per cent they were sex objects. Less than one per cent showed women as leadng independent lives of their own.

But advertising people have their statistics.

"Most market surveys say most cars are bought by men and research shows men make the decisions," said Peter Hunter, president of McConnell Advertising Co. Ltd. of Toronto.

"A number of years ago all ads tended to talk down to audiences — whether men or women. With increased sophistication and education, advertising has tremendously upgraded itself."

Hunter said: "But advertising is a hard-nosed business and it's not trying to play anyone up or down. Nobody is consciously trying to appeal to women."

TRADITIONAL CURES REASON OR RITUAL?

BOSTON (AP) — Many pediatricians routinely prescribe traditional remedies such as excessive bed rest, vitamin supplements and tonsillectomies even though their effectiveness is in question, says a Harvard professor.

Dr. Thomas Cone, clinical professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School, says doctors are so accustomed to these techniques that they seldom question whether they are dictated by reason or ritual.

The 'Tough Kid' Gets a Chance

Own Classroom Promised To Habitual Delinquents

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

School might be okay for other kids — the ones who go home for supper, and do their homework, and brush their teeth before going to bed.

"They might like it but I don't."

"You can't smoke in school. You can't take the afternoon off when it's sunny and you have to study things I'm not interested in — what do I care about poetry."

That, says juvenile delinquent counsellor, Phil Perry, is typical of the complaint levelled at the regular school system by a "habitual juvenile delinquent."

LOW AVERAGE

The habitual juvenile delinquent is considered a pretty tough kid, says Perry. He's probably been in court twice for stealing cars, has flunked one or two grades and on his second time round in Grade 6, comes up with a C or D average.

"It's difficult for a kid who is earmarked as a habitual juvenile delinquent to be considered anything but a problem by his fellow classmates and teachers," Perry, the director of the Youth Attendance Centre, says.

"He's starting off with 10 strikes against him."

FINANCES SHARED

The Centre is a correctional facility financed by the four municipalities to offer group counselling. Victoria juveniles are referred there as part of their probation for a specified number of hours a week.

Perry feels any attempt to change or rehabilitate the delinquent has to recognize his membership in the delinquent sub-system.

"We want to direct treatment to him as part of that system."

Part of the treatment, a big part, said Perry, is education. And the system of teaching these youths is in for a change.

JOINT PLAN

A classroom where "habituals" can begin the education process again, outside the regular school system will be started at the Centre in September.

Funds for the classroom and a specially qualified teacher — a joint proposal by the Greater Victoria school board and Attendance Centre staff — will be provided by the Department of Education's special services branch.

NEW CHANCE

The classroom will be located in a large homey front room in the rambling house which is the centre, on Coldharbour Road, and students will make use of gym facilities at Central junior secondary school nearby, associate director of instruction for the Victoria school board, Glen Wall explained.

"The students will get the chance to begin again without having to compare themselves to other students — start off comfortably on their own level, and move on from there," he said.

Those considered for the course, will be the average delinquent referred to the centre.

Ages usually range from 12 to 17 and offences range from vandalism and trouble in school, to break and enter (the largest proportion) and shoplifting (the most common offence for girls).

A report by Perry shows most of them come from within an eight mile radius of the centre, with the biggest proportion living in the Blanshard Court area.

COMMON BONDS

"While there are no clear-cut gangs in Victoria," said Perry, "it's surprising to observe the extent to which delinquent boys — who have never met — know each other by reputation, go with the same girls, use the same language or can seek each other out when they change schools."

Perry says these kids need their peer group. "They don't really have any other force of discipline in their life and I think their peer group can be used as a powerful constructive force."

The eventual goal of the classroom, however, is to feed the student back into the regular school system when he's ready.

The project has received a favorable reaction from one teacher representative, Bob Mitchell, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers Association.

He described it as a "small start into a large area."

The biggest problem with the delinquent in the regular school system, says Mitchell, is his inability to settle down.

"The public school system requires discipline because of numbers, and these kids require individual attention and can't get it because of numbers."

"Especially in junior high school a lot of students find a lot of the courses are not particularly useful to them. They're also beyond the control of the teachers. They smoke at home and are not used to having that particular pastime curtailed.

He said the youths are usually, frustrated by school work and get attention from the peers by being nuisances.

"They tend to be bigger kids, see themselves as young adults and resent being treated like kids," said Mitchell.

In the Attendance Centre classroom, however, they'll be the bigger kids.

Parts Snarl Hits Crops

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's spring sowing, given urgent priority this year to recoup last year's crop losses, is reported in jeopardy because of haphazard field work and bureaucratic snarls in supplying farm machines.

Leninskye Znamya, Communist party daily for the Moscow province, sharply criticized a huge supply base northwest of Moscow on Tuesday for embroiling operations in paperwork.

Workers who come to fetch spare parts for their farms often have to stand in line for hours or even days, wasting man hours with paper work while tractors and sowing machines stand idle for lack of spare parts, it said.

Shortages of machinery and breakdown of equipment were considered by many foreign specialists to have been contributing factors to last year's disastrous harvest.

Senator Quits —Life Too Short

OTTAWA (CP) — Retiring Senator John Nichol explained his resignation Wednesday by saying that life is too short to spend it all in the Senate.

The 49-year-old Vancouver Liberal, whose resignation becomes effective April 19, offered a few ideas on Senate reform. They did not include abolition.

"After spending seven years here, it would be somewhat strange if I did not have some opinions," he said in his farewell speech.

"I reject abolition of the Senate.

"The call for an elected Senate is made only by people who do not understand the legislative process. I can think of nothing more confusing than a second elected body attempting to be the valid spokesman for the people, in direct day-to-day competition with the other place," a reference to the Commons.

He dismissed the imposing of age limits on members of the Senate as "age bigotry."

Restricting the proportion of Senate members who belong to any one political party would be a good idea, he said.

The Senate should abdicate its veto power and replace it with the power to delay bills for a short period of time — less than six months.

The present compulsory retirement age of 75 should be abolished, a term appointment to the Senate established and a two-tier system of senators created. Nichol suggested a term of somewhere between 12 and 20 years.

He suggested that once a senator completed his term in office he could join the ranks of senators emeritus. The senator emeritus would keep his title, receive a pension on the basis of his active service and be entitled to serve on committees and speak in debate. He would not, however, be allowed to vote.

'Apply Law Equally'

OTTAWA (CP) — A Saskatchewan Indian complained Wednesday that the law is being administered differently for whites and Indians — with the latter sometimes getting lesser sentences for the same crimes as others.

Chief David Ahenakew of Prince Albert, head of the Federation of Saskatchewan Indians, said while extenuating circumstances must be considered in each case, the law should apply equally to whites and Indians.

Ahenakew was appearing with a delegation before the Senate legal and constitutional affairs committee which is studying the question of paroles and temporary absences from prison.

The delegation presented a brief which basically called for greater understanding between the Indian people and the various judicial systems and for greater acceptance of parolees on the reserves.

But in pressing those points Chief Ahenakew delved into justice and an attitude of defying the law developing in a small group of Indians.

He said he knows of cases where Indians have committed serious crimes but got lighter sentences than whites would have received for the same crimes.

He said he could not explain this attitude of judges, but added that it contributes to a breakdown of law and order on reserves.

Most Saskatchewan Indians knew the law and if judges were "going to feel sorry for an individual people" the problems of that people would not be solved.

Indians Win Jamieson Pledge

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons debated the thorny issue of aboriginal rights for the first time Wednesday but more was done to improve the lot of native people at a quiet meeting in a downstairs committee room.

The debate, punctuated with political charges and counter charges, wound up without a vote and no indication when the House will tackle the aboriginal-rights question again.

Downstairs, however, a delegation from the Native Council of Canada persuaded Regional Expansion Minister Don Jamieson to redraft a series of Agricultural and Rural Development Act (ARDA) programs to benefit native groups.

Jamieson, who said the council presented a convicing case, announced he will begin negotiations with the provinces to increase opportunities for natives under ARDA.

A. E. (Tony) Belcourt, president of the council which represents 400,000 Canadians of Indian ancestry, said ARDA schemes are tailored to the business community and have proven virtually useless to natives with limited or non-existent resources.

Jamieson said major ARDA changes are needed to expand employment and other opportunities for natives, but he anticipated no serious problems in reaching agreement with the provinces.

In the Commons, meanwhile, Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien refused to support a motion that endorsed the definition of aboriginal rights adopted by the National Indian Brotherhood.

The brotherhood has called for negotiated land or cash settlements from the government for all natives not covered by treaties and says treaties considered unfair by the natives should be renegotiated.

If accepted, Chretien said, the definition would have far-reaching financial and land implications and coud lead to settlements that the Indians themselves do not expect to achieve.

"These are negotiating positions and they do not expect us to accept them in their entirety."

He said the issue at stake is far too complex to solve with a single policy or approach. Instead, solutions must be worked out on a region-by-region basis, taking into account the particular factors involved in each case.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said the debate offered Parliament a unique opportunity to admit past abuses and neglect and "set a course for future redress."

Rejecting an invitation from Chretien to define aboriginal rights. Howard said the House should merely recognize that Indians do have some rights by virtue of the fact that they inhabited the country before the white man arrived.

Once this is done, he said, a settlement could be negotiated jointly by the government and the Indians.

Lewis Flays Land 'Scandal'

TORONTO (CP) — David Lewis, national New Democratic Party leader, said Wednesday, that public ownership of residential land is the only effective way to bring down the high cost of housing and end the "scandal" of land speculation.

Lewis told the Toronto Home Builders' Association that the dreams of many people some day to own their own home has become a mirage, "forever out of reach because their income may never catch up to the cost of a new home."

Lewis called for a program of "dynamic public development" of land that would involve government acquisition of all residential land suitable for development.

This would be followed by a gradual purchase of land already developed. The land should be kept under public ownership and leased out for residential use, he said.

The NDP leader said public ownership would eliminate the scandal of land speculation which has increased land costs in Metropolitan Toronto up to 50 per cent of the cost of a new home.

He said a new single-family home in Toronto now averages $45,000, which only five per cent of the population can afford.

"The situation has become a nightmare rather than a mirage," he said.

Provincial Festival Performers Named

The roster of performers chosen by adjudicators to represent Victoria in Vancouver at the Provincial Music Festival was completed Wednesday with the selection of junior string solo and junior instrumental solo championship winners.

Caryl MacIsaac, a young violinist from Nanaimo, and clarinetist Mart Peltier of Victoria, both under 16, were chosen by adjudicator Francis Chaplin.

Runners-up for the string championship were Timmy Mayer, 12, who also won the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' award; Alan Horgan, 11, winner of one of two A. F. Gowe Memorial awards; Susan Wait, nine, and Laura Lee, 11.

For the instrumental solo runners-up were Glen Molson, guitar; Tony Qualizza, accordion, and Michael Rennie, accordion.

The two winners will join juniors Philip Jaynes (Duncan), vocalist, and Gloria Wong, pianist, and seniors Allen Reiser, pianist; Judith Temple, vocalist; Rolf Gilstein, cellist; James Kennedy, baroque flute; Joan Watson, French horn, and Bruce Domoney, guitar, as provincial festival finalists.

Senior winners only from that event will be eligible to go on to the national festival in Toronto.

Chaplin had high praise for the chamber ensemble of Marc Destrube, Gary Russell and Roger Scobie, awarding them 88 marks in an uncontested class and saying he hoped they would continue.

He deplored the lack of interest of the public, however.

Joyce Menting and Janet Doughty in a cello-violin duet, were complimented by Chaplin, as was the Victoria Conservatory of Music Junior Orchestra, conducted by Dorothy Evans.

Exceptional skill and talent were displayed by sisters Hilary and Jennifer Wallis and brother and sister Paul and Maria Venturin in violin duets for under-13s.

The Kiwanis Club of Saanich Junior award of $75 was presented Wednesday to Caryl MacIsaac.

Accordion and guitar classes ended Wednesday with some sensitive, musically adroit and brilliant performances.

Final event in this session was the instrumental solo senior championship and guitarist Bruce Domoney, who had earlier gained a rare 90 from adjudicator Ted Komar, was named winner.

With school choral sessions completed this morning, only two more events remain before the 1973 festival closes.

These are the schools honor performance Friday at Central Junior and the Festival Highlights concert Saturday at McPherson Playhouse.

FESTIVAL BEST AT McPHERSON

Variety, exceptional talent and technical skill, show up prominently in the program chosen for the Festival Highlights Concert Saturday.

The annual event draws together a representative group from the Greater Victoria Music Festival at McPherson Playhouse at 8 p.m.

Included in the concert will be the Village Squires, this year's winners of the CBC award, and the amazing Suzuki ensemble from Frona Colquhoun's studio — some 60 violinists aged from three years to early teens.

Soloists range from nine-year-old recorder player Deborah Jackson, called "an amazing talent" by the adjudicator, to mezzo soprano Judith Temple, this year's Rose Bowl winner.

Another singer is junior champion Philip Jaynes of Duncan.

Victoria city medallion winner Allen Reiser, junior and intermediate champions Gloria Wong and Jean MacRae and multi-award winner Walter Prossnitz are the pianists.

James Kennedy, baroque flute, Joan Watson, French horn, Bruce Domoney, guitar, Rolf Gilstein, cello (another multi-award winner), and Veronica Cooper from speech arts have also been chosen.

Still to be announced is a string or other instrumental representative from the Wednesday night session.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old woman who left one motel without paying her bill and paid for another with a bad cheque was given a one-year probationary term on Wednesday.

Charlotte Ethel Marie Muir, 627 Kelly, pleaded guilty in provincial court April 6 to two charges of obtaining lodgings by fraud and one of false pretences under $200.

Miss Muir was ordered by Judge William Ostler to repay the sum of $141.46 to the two motels involved, one in Sannich and one in Victoria.

★ ★ ★

Burk Mullins, 64 San Jose, was fined $400 by Ostler after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving Tuesday on Oswego.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, a 42-year-old man was sent to jail for a total of three months after pleading guilty to impaired driving and driving while under suspension.

Bertel Lavern Preus, 635 Hoffman, was arrested in Colwood March 7, after an accident on Goldstream Avenue. It was the man's third impaired charge. Perus' licence was suspended for two years.

★ ★ ★

Two men were each fined $350 and banned from driving for three months after pleading guilty to separate impaired driving offences.

Rowland A. Knight, 54, of 131-1830 Fern, was stopped by city police on Bay early Wednesday.

Ronald Charles Ritchie, 20, of 5-1030 St. Charles, pleaded guilty to an impaired offence dating from the same day.

★ ★ ★

Anthony Garveth, 17, of 522 Rupert, Tuesday was given a suspended sentence and one year's probation for possession of marijuana.

As probationary condition Carveth must stay away from drugs and people associated with drugs and to continue to attend school.

HOLIDAY JULY 2

OTTAWA (FP) — The July 1 holiday this year in Canada will be observed on July 2, a Monday, the House of Commons was informed Wednesday.

A. D. Hales (PC—Wellington) pointed out that "the most historic holiday" in Canada, that of July 1, falls on a Sunday this year. He asked the Secretary of State James Faulkner if the minister could inform the House on what date that holiday would be celebrated.

Faulkner said within the act it is provided that where the date falls on a Sunday the celebration will take place on the Monday.

Jail No Deterrent Says Heroin Addict

VANCOUVER (CP) — Does a jail sentence serve as a deterrent to the drug addict?

A prisoner at the British Columbia penitentiary answered with an emphatic "no" during a symposium held in Vancouver under the auspices of the B.C. Corrections Service.

The prisoner, identified only as Bernie and a heroin addict for 25 years, said a jail sentence "doesn't act as a deterrent ... it's a complete waste."

The symposium, attended by some 200 doctors, nurses, social workers, lawyers, clergymen, teachers and representatives of law enforcement and correctional agencies, later issued a report urging a medical approach to treating the drug addict. But it reached no firm conclusion on a suggestion, supported by Bernie, that controlled use of narcotics should be made legal.

In a talk liberally sprinkled with the jargon of the prison yard and the drug addict, Bernie, 44, told how he had spent most of the last 20 years of his life popping in and out of prison.

JUST AT WEEKENDS

"The first time I got busted for the stuff was 1953. I'd been using it for about 4½ to five years but I was never addicted. I used to fix just on weekends here and there.

"In '53 I went to jail and I sprung myself in three months and 10 days. In 1954 I was sentenced to four years and fined $500 or an additional six months for possession of 100th of a grain on a handkerchief ...

"I figured I was fairly heavily penalized for a period of four years for such a small amount of heroin. I was out in one year ...

"I was a pretty good boy. I say good boy because I wasn't messing with junk. I was out there blowing cans (safe-cracking) and keeping pretty active, because this was my life.

"Another 13 months and I fell for a 12, this time behind junk again. So I get out after six years and four months ...

"I went to work as a roofer, the first time I was gainfully employed in a period of 20 years. Boom! I get myself wired up again and the next thing you know I'm back in action.

"I get nailed again and get four years. So I make another go, I take a welding course. I went to work for a while but I got laid off owing to the fact that shop welders are a dime a dozen.

STEADY LOSERS

"Anyway, being a prowler, I'm up to my old tricks again. I got busted and I got six months; the judge gave me a break.

"But I think as I look at you people, 16 years I've walked the big yard — but has it really changed me? I think, if you look at many convicts, we're continual losers time after time after time.

"We wake up, like I've wakened up right now at the age of 44. The front of my hair is waving goodbye to the back.

I'm not as fat as I used to be, and here I am still walking that yard. I say, will this trick ever finish?

"What I want to say in essence is that I don't really believe ... that all these years in prison stop a guy from using stuff.

"What I want to say, my most important point here, is that it doesn't act as a deterrent.

"It's a complete waste. This is what I say as I stand up here right now ..., I speak for the legalization of narcotics. This way, a guy might be able to save himself from a lifetime of walking the big yard, may be able to make a life for himself, some way or somehow."

Cycling Helps Lung Patients

VANCOUVER (CP) — Emphysema and chronic bronchitis patients, many of them victims of long and heavy cigarette habits, are trying to bicycle and walk their way to normal breathing at Vancouver General Hospital.

Each day, six to eight patients, many over 50 and all suffering from respiratory disorders, head to the University of British Columbia's lung function laboratory at the hospital where they ride bicycles and walk treadmills in a special exercise program.

China Raps Soviet Asia Pact

TOKYO (Reuter) — China criticized the Soviet Union today, saying the Russian proposal for an Asian collective security pact was designed to divide and ultimately control the countries of the region.

In his maiden speech to the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE) here, China's chief delegate, An Chi-yuan, did not mention the Soviet Union by name in his attack.

It began with a warning that a "superpower is stepping up its expansion in this region in an attempt to seize hegemony."

He added: "It not only instigated a war of aggression (the 1971 Indo-Pakistan conflict in which the Soviet Union backed India) to dismember another country, but has been making a show of force everywhere in the region . . . infringing on other countries' sovereignty and gravely menacing the peace and security of this region."

Europe Loves Our Horsemeat

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — An official in the federal department of agriculture says that more than 80,000 horses have been slaughtered in Canada and shipped to Europe for human consumption during the last three years.

Dr. John Sproule, associate director of the meat inspection branch of the department, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that this represents about 50 million pounds of meat.

In addition, about 2,000 live horses were shipped from Canada, probably for the same purpose.

Although many horses are certified for breeding purposes in this country many end up in the slaughter houses, said Dr. Rae Bonin, of the health of animals branch of the department of agriculture.

He said the demand for live horses in Europe has increased sharply during the last two years.

Raising horses for the sole purpose of selling them on the meat market wouldn't be profitable, said Dr. Bonin. However consumers in Europe are paying the same for horse meat as they are for beef.

If prices continue to rise then such an industry may be possible on the 100 pregnant mares' urine farms in Ontario. The urine is used to produce estrogen in making birth control pills and for treatment of the side effects of menopause.

The 3,000 foals produced on these farms used to be killed at birth but now the European market is buying them once they become 90 days old. The Pregnant Mare's Urine Act passed in June, 1970, now protects the foals until they are 90 days old.

Lloyd Coleman of Toronto, in charge of the ministry of agriculture's farm licensing program, said horse meat is good for heart patients. It's just as good as beef, he said, but has a low cholesterol count.

Horse brokers like Norman Picov, Pickering, Ont., sells horses to a plant in Owen Sound. He said he has to make trips to the United States to find enough horses. The number of horses in Canada has declined rapidly during the last 30 years.

Mr. Picov said he felt some horse meat finds its way onto the tables of Quebec disguised as beef. Quebec is the only province in Canada that buys large amounts of horse meat.

Dr. Kenneth Craig of Toronto, head of the ministry's meat inspection department, said there are no provincial or federal regulations controlling the sale of horse meat on the market beyond those pertaining to inspection.

Hotel Owner Dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Injuries suffered while trying to break up a beer parlor fight at the Balmoral Hotel have taken the life of hotel owner Verl Ferguson, 43. A man was in custody Tuesday in connection with the incident, which police said involved about 12 persons, including several waiters.

56 in View Royal Ask Board For Sewer Area Designation

Property owners in a part of View Royal have petitioned the Capital Regional District to designate their area for installation of sewers.

The 56 petitioners live in the area south of the railway bridge across the Old Island Highway.

The petition was considered by the regional board Wednesday, and referred to local works and services committee.

Previous plans for sewering all of View Royal have been rejected by ratepayers on two occasions.

The chairman of the Metorpolitan Board of Health, Esquimalt Ald. Ken Hill, told a health board meeting Tuesday he will try to find out what plans the provincial government has to install sewers in View Royal.

If the answer is negative, the next step may be to take one or two serious septic tank polluters to court, said senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

Dye testing in the past has shown most septic tank fields can't absorb effluent, which leaks into roadside ditches and drainage systems.

★ ★ ★

The board went on record as favoring a move of fuel oil tanks from the Inner Harbor to national defence property on the west side of Esquimalt Harbor.

Directors endorsed a recommendation from regional planning committee that board chairman Jim Campbell "vigorously pursue" the new site.

Campbell said the Esquimalt Harbor site will serve the region better and make the existing storage tank area more attractive.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said some installations at the Inner Harbor cannot expand. He said the move, if it can be arranged, "would rationalize storage for the next two decades, certainly."

★ ★ ★

Increases in building permit fees of 25 per cent were given initial approval.

The fees would apply in the areas outside municipalities. The bylaw was given three readings, with final reading due at the next board meeting in two weeks.

Board members were told the increases will bring the fees into line with those levied in Saanich where conditions were deemed comparable.

New fees for a $25,000 house, for example, would be $97, for a $30,000 house $115 and for a $35,000 house, $133.

★ ★ ★

Construction of new changing rooms at Elk-Beaver Lake Regional Park, adjacent to the site of the old Black Swan cafe, was approved by the board.

The board agreed to borrow $20,000 for the job.

An additional $20,000 from Saanich Rotary Club and $17,000 from Saanich municipality will also be donated.

Courtenay Sports Centre Vote Saturday

COURTENAY — Advanced polls opened today for a referendum in Courtenay School District on a proposed $1,250,000 swimming pool-ice arena complex.

The referendum Saturday would allow the regional district of Comox-Strathcona to obtain funds to build and equip the complex.

Five hundred participants in Sunday's walkathon held to raise money for the centre will have raised $10,000 if all pledges are paid in full.

The money will form part of a $100,000 public subscription pledge towards the cost of the project.

The walk began at G. P. Vanier school near Courtenay, and 350 entrants finished the 30-mile course. One hundred others finished 24 miles and 50 finished between eight and 23 miles.

Saturday's referendum will also ask voters if they favor obtaining $25,000 for the village of Cumberland for recreational purposes.

Union Heaven Hits a Snag

By VINCENT MATTHEWS

CANBERRA (CP) — The Australian government has hit the first snags in its attempts to create a trade union heaven.

One of the Labor government's first legislative acts after its election victory last December was to introduce four weeks' annual leave for the country's 220,000 federal public servants—providing they were members of a trade union.

The legislation passed the House of Representatives where Labor has a nine-seat majority, but was defeated in the Senate.

Labor Minister Clyde Cameron had to concede defeat and brought in a new bill providing the leave for all public servants, whether members of trade unions or not.

Another election promise was to set up an inquiry into industrial relations. Cameron said the inquiry was to shape the whole course of Australia's future industrial relations.

But the executive of the Australian Council of Trade Unions at a secret meeting decided against co-operating with such an inquiry because it was felt trade unions would not have a strong enough representation.

The real showdown over this inquiry has yet to come—after the union opposition becomes public.

BACKS UNION DEMAND

But both Cameron and Prime Minister Gough Whitlam have said publicly that the inquiry will still be held.

Even counting these snags, the over-all picture for the trade unions in Australia has never been better. At a hearing before a wage tribunal, the federal government gave full backing to a union demand for an increase in the minimum wage of $14, raising it to $65 a week.

The previous Liberal-Country party government regularly opposed union claims for wage increases before the tribunal.

The Labor government told the tribunal the economy could well stand a substantial increase in wages.

This new government attitude reflects its desire to please the unions. While the previous government blamed the inflation rate in Australia on rapidly rising wages, the Labor government has been attacking price increases and ignoring the wage bill.

The unions are pleased, but the federal treasury is growing increasingly concerned at the effects on the economy. Senior officials say they believe that if the minimum wage rises above $60 a week the Australian economy will be in serious trouble from inflation.

But at this stage in the new government's life the fashionable slogan is "more dollars to the workers," and the government is getting a lot of support for that objective.

Another government election pledge was to abolish penal clauses from the industrial laws. The previous government toughened these penal clauses under which unions were fined heavily for striking in defiance of an industrial court order.

FAVORS CONCILIATION

Under intended legislation, union officials will be protected from employer victimization and from action in civil courts.

Cameron has said he wants to change the emphasis in the industrial laws from arbitration to conciliation—from dictation to negotiation between employers and workers.

But he also wants to strengthen the unions' bargaining positions by encouraging unions to merge. Australia's 2.4 million workers now are represented by 300 trade unions but many of these are too weak to negotiate effectively and rely on court orders to protect their members' interest.

If Cameron and the big union bosses have their way, the employers will face giant worker organizations representing thousands of members and able to bring whole industries to a stop with strike action.

The Liberal-Country party opposition has attacked these Labor proposals—and in particular a government declaration that contracts for government work will be awarded the best conditions for workers and are only to firms which provide on the best of terms with trade unions.

The opposition has called this government "blackmail" and moved a censure motion in Parliament—which was defeated.

The true test of the success or failure of the government's new Labor laws and regulations will come with union use or abuse of the strike weapon.

As the previous government got tougher with the unions so the number of strikes rose. Australians have been plagued with strikes by public transport workers, oil workers, gas and electricity workers. It might be felt that the price for industrial peace is well worth paying even if it does mean growth of inflation.

Perseverance Uncovers a Hidden Alberta Lake

CANMORE, Alta. (CP) — An isolated mountain lake, with hot and cold springs, has been found tucked in a rugged valley near the Trans-Canada Highway.

The lake was located last August by Harry Connolly, an employee of a consulting firm making an assessment of the region's recreation potential.

An indication of the lake, about 60 miles west of Calgary near Mount Lougheed, was first discovered in a study of aerial photographs which appeared to reveal a series of seven small lakes.

Another set of photographs taken in the winter raised the possibility of hot springs when they showed the usually thick covering of snow missing.

Connolly set off on snowmobile April 2, 1972, to locate the lakes but he and a partner were unable to find the valley and gave up after six edays.

The search was continued by helicopter and the valley found on crown land but they couldn't land, he said.

"The lake is at the base of a glacier and the snow was at least 20 feet deep. The hot pools were just dimples in the snow. I couldn't see any open water."

Connolly talked with guides and hunters from the area during the next three months but none of them knew about the lake.

Twice, on weekends, he tried to hike into the lake but could not find the valley and the thick woods meant it would often take hours to go even one mile.

On a third weekend, he climbed over a peak to what he felt was the right valley but he could see nothing because of fog.

He returned to camp and when the fog lifted he tried again.

"You must remember that what I expected to find was a series of small lakes or hot springs.

"Instead, I found just one lake — a beautiful lake surrounded by Alpine meadow.

"Access is difficult, almost impossible. The valley floor is trapped on all four sides by mountain cliffs.

"The hot springs were visible as bubbles on the lake's surface. I knew then that what had shown up on earlier photographs were actually pools of hot water on an otherwise frozen lake surface."

Connolly said when he approached the rock-strewn edge of the lake, "I immediately sank up to my knees in the loose gravel."

"It was like quick sand — quick gravel you might call it."

He sprawled backwards to reach solid ground and still does not know how far he might have sunk.

"I finally found a rocky rib that would support me and stuck my hand into the water.

"The top two or three inches were warm — at least 75 or 80 degrees, but below that the water was icy cold.

"This meant the lake was being supplied by both warm and cold springs and would be impossible for swimming."

Higher Pay Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration proposed Tuesday that the minimum wage in the United States be increased to $2.30 an hour from $1.60 over a three-year period. The proposal was coupled with a request for a lower wage for teen-age workers that produced sharp criticism.

Cold Welcome This Summer For Isle of Man Visitors

LONDON (AP) — Something is amiss on one of Britain's oldest and smallest dependencies, the Isle of Man.

Just when the 50,000 islanders off England's northwest coast should be dressing up their 60 by 30 miles to receive the usual thousands of summer visitors from the mainland, nationalistic ferment appears to be growing.

More and more wealthy people from Britain are building vacation homes on the island, upsetting the native Manxmen.

The Isle of Man is a deptndency of the Birtish Crown, and London holds the ultimate responsibility for good government. But the isle has its own parliament, called the Court of Tynwald, its own laws and its own courts.

This week a local nationalist organization named Mec Vannin sent a petition to the Queen asking that she authorize suspension of the Tynwald.

"A malady besets this land," the petition said. "Perhaps the most disturbing point of this sickness is the attitude of the general public to the incidents. When normally respectable matrons . . . rejoice in total destruction by fire . . . something must indeed be amiss."

Mec Vannin wants London to set up a tribunal to inquire into the situation.

The "sickness" began to surface in February when a local reporter received a scribbled note threatening acts of sabotage.

A $50,000 bungalow was burned to the ground a month later. Police said it was arson.

Another fire caused $12,000 worth of damage to a house owned by a "comeover," the Manx term for property owners from the mainland.

Graffiti blossomed around the island, with "No More New Residents—No More Development" a favorite.

And John Bolton, chairman of the local government finance board, received a blank bullet in his mail with a note that said: "The next one will go through you. Halt genocide."

The arson and the threats are blamed on Fo Halloo, Gaelic for Underground Movement. The organization in the first issue of a news sheet called Manx Free Press charged there is "a treasonable conspiracy against the Manx people."

HE SELLS IGLOOS TO THE ESKIMOS

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto architect is cornering a new market — he's selling igloos to Eskimos.

And his northern customers are elated. They're so happy with the product, they're talking about installing wall-to-wall broadloom.

Jeremy Jenkins' firm, Shelter Ltd., built a children's camp using seven imitation igloos of wood coated with polyurethane foam.

The structure caught the eye of Eskimos at Baker Lake on Hudson Bay. They decided it was just what they needed for meetings of the Arctic Christian Fellowship.

It would be bigger than anything they could build of snow and wouldn't melt in the summer.

The Eskimos collected donations and along with a $15,000 loan decided on a tailor-made dome 40 feet in diameter and 20 feet high, with 10 triangular windows.

Jenkins flew up to supervise its assembly. The Eskimos pronounced it perfect, he said, except for the lack of broadloom.

Word spread across the Arctic and Jenkins since has had several other orders and inquiries.

You Must Seek Work To Collect

OTTAWA (CP) — To be eligible for continuing unemployment insurance benefits when out of work, a person must do his utmost to find a job, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

He said a person must search out all available work opportunities "so that no avenue is left unexplored."

The obligation is contained in regulations under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Andras said this fact is reasonably well known to workers across Canada but he hopes it will be given more publicity.

Million Murders Charged to MD

DUESSELDORF, Germany (AP) — Dr. Albert Ganzenmueller, a Nazi official who allegedly drew up the railway timetable for Hitler's "final solution" of the Jewish problem, went on trial Tuesday charged with aiding the murder of one million persons.

Ganzenmueller, 68, is accused of supervising transport of Jews to Nazi death camps. He said he opposed Hitler's "Jewish policies" and learned of the crimes only after the war.

PIPELINE GAS FROM MANURE

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — There may be gold in them thar' cow chips.

Chemists say cattle manure can be converted into pipeline gas by mixing the dried manure with hydrogen, which reacts to form methane and ethane, the major constituents of natural gas.

Herman Feldman of the U.S. bureau of mines in Pittsburgh told the Society that the bureau of mines is developing technology to convert solid wastes to clean energy processes. He contends that if an economic way of doing this can be found, the solid waste disposal problem could be solved and the clean energy shortage alleviated.

Cattle manure is "an attractive feed stock for a synthetic natural gas plant," Feldman says. For example:

● Cattle manure is abundant, and the size and concentration of feed lots simplify its collection in the amounts required for reasonably-sized gas plants.

● The manure requires no preparation, apart from partial drying. The cow has taken care of the necessary shredding and grinding.

● The areas with the highest concentration of cattle feed are also areas of high natural gas production so gas transmission lines are usually available.

● Experiments show that cattle manure is easily converted to a gas having a greater heating value than could be obtained by converting coal or naptha, a volatile petroleum.

Feldman says the reaction occurs at around 1,000 degrees and at a pressure of around 1,000 PSIG — pounds per square inch gauge — thus allowing the gas produced to be injected into gas transmission lines without recompression.

It Wasn't Much of a Birthday Gift

OTTAWA — Progressive Conservative MPs threw a surprise birthday party for Party Leader Robert Stanfield Wednesday night — just a few hours after he learned the latest public opinion polls showed a six-per-cent drop in party popularity. "It's a birthday present from Dr. Gallup," Mr. Stanfield said on his 59th birthday.

But he said he wasn't worried about the poll which, he said, is six weeks out of date.

HOLLYWOOD — Singer-actor Dean Martin, 55, was reported Wednesday in "very good" condition following surgery for a stomach ulcer at a Los Angeles hospital.

LOS ANGELES — Character actor Ted De Corsia, best known for his portrayals of villains and as Mike Hammer in a long career in radio, motion pictures and television, is dead at 69. De Corsia died Wednesday in suburban Encino.

LONDON — Alistair Cooke, American journalist and broadcaster, was made an honorary knight commander of the Order of the British Empire (K.B.E.) by the Queen Wednesday. The award was given in "recognition of his outstanding contribution over many years to Anglo-American mutual understanding," a foreign office announcement said.

CHICAGO — Nicodemus Lafferty thought he was going to get a $551 refund from the United States treasury department on his 1972 federal income tax. Instead, the International Revenue Service sent him a bill for $60,180.56. A tax service which handled the Cedar Lake, Ind., man's return said they traced the problem to a computer in Memphis, Tenn.

EDINBURGH — An 89-year-old woman who held the secret recipe for Drambuie, the scotch-whisky liqueur, died at her Scottish home Wednesday.

Georgina MacKinnon, who was chief of the family Drambuie business, kept the ingredients in her head. But the written recipe also is held in the vaults of two Scottish banks.

OSLO — A Soviet diplomat in Oslo was declared persona non grata Wednesday and ordered to leave Norway for his role in a spy scandal here, the Norwegian foreign ministry announced. The diplomat, Yury Vasilyeyich Polyushkin, third secretary of the Soviet embassy, was expelled after an urgent meeting between Foregin Minister Dagfinn Vaarvik and Soviet Ambassador Sergei K. Romanovsky.

A ministry press statement claimed Polyushkin had been a contact for Ole Martin Horcystad, 25, a student sentenced last week to seven years imprisonment for espionage when he worked in the Soviet embassy in 1971-72.

LOS ANGELES — Anna Kashfi, former wife of Marlon Brando, filed suit Wednesday for custody of their 14-year-old son, Christian saying Brando's x-rated performance in Last Tango in Paris and social activism were embarrassing the boy and ruining his morals.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Need a Standard Oil credit card? Go see Gregg Chastain of Suburban Tigard. He got 315 of them in the mail. A spokesmand for the firm's Portland office said it apparently was a computer mixup.

Blind Woman Aids Readers

PARIS, Ont. (CP) — Children are astonished when Marie Gilles corrects their reading mistakes.

She is blind.

Neither does she need assistance from books in braille.

"When you've listened to children recite from their readers all your life, you get to know them by heart," says the 48-year-old teaching assistant.

We call our exciting New Paint Latex Velvet-Lustre Enamel.
Here's why:

VELVET because it's a soft touch to touch-up. Leaves barely a trace. If you skip a place, simply cover it later when the original coat dries. Blends perfectly.

LATEX because clean-up is a breeze. Simply wash brushes or rollers with water. And one coat is usually all you need to cover most previously painted surfaces.

ENAMEL because it's tough, hard-surfaced and hard-wearing. Washable, too, but it won't leave those annoying shiny patches. Now you can paint walls and woodwork from the same can.

LUSTRE because it gives you a unique, elegant, lustrous finish. Just a hint of sheen that adds subtle new life to your rooms.

BAPCO because we're proud to add this exciting innovation to our product line. When it says BAPCO you know it's good. And it's at your BAPCO dealer now.

Spring in Northern Ontario can mean muddy roads, so perhaps that's why this foreign compact parked on a Sudbury street is equipped with oversized tires. Getting them to fit would be a king-sized headache, however.

Ottawa Eyes Year-Round Job Opportunity Program

OTTAWA (CP) — A flexible year-round employment program combining Opportunities for Youth (OFY) and the Local Initiatives Program (LIP) may be recommended by the government this summer, says State Secretary Hugh Faulkner.

Discussions on such a combined "opportunities-for-people" program have just begun, he told the Commons broadcasting committee during discussion of his department's spending estimates.

This step is in line with others under consideration by the government in an effort to overhaul its current myriad social assistance and employment programs.

A meeting of federal and provincial welfare ministers later this month was expected to deal with suggestions for changes in programs ranging from family allowances and pensions to welfare.

Faulkner said the $40-million OFY program has never been set out in legislation because it was felt that the temporary student employment program should remain flexible.

It was easier to adapt the program if legislative amendments were not required.

In reply to questions by a number of MPs, he said that those running the program had made a number of efforts to improve the consultative progress behind the awarding of grants.

About 4,000 projects, employing about 35,000 people, are expected to be funded by OFY this summer.

—Faulkner said he would be glad to take the blame for rejections — about two-thirds of 11,500 applications will be rejected — if he could receive credit for those accepted.

Stamp Commemorates Nova Scotia Premier

OTTAWA (CP) — An eight-cent stamp commemorating the 100th anniversary of the death of former Nova Scotia premier Joseph Howe will be issued May 16, the post office announced today.

The design will include a portrait of the politician, journalist and orator in two-color lithography. About 24 million stamps will be issued.

Howe was a leader in the fight for responsible government and a Nova Scotia patriot who first argued against Confederation. By 1868, however, he dropped his opposition to union and in 1869 was elected to the House of Commons.

FEWER FATALITIES PLEDGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand pledged Wednesday to try to reduce the country's rate of traffic fatalities by 15 per cent over the next five years.

He vouched Canadian support for an international convention setting the target at a meeting of NATO's committee on the challenges of modern society.

The resolution was introduced by the United states delegation to the committee, an organ of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

It is to be voted on formally at the committee's next meeting in November, but it already has won wide support.

Marchand told reporters after the closed-door meeting that 5,500 Canadians died in traffic last year, more than died in the Korean war.

He said the government will increase its efforts at reducing traffic deaths under the Motor Vehicle Safety Act — which authorizes crash-worthiness standards — and the road-safety program.

It also would consult the provinces, which have primary jurisdiction over highway construction and driving regulations.

The resolution would commit each country to reduce by 15 per cent the rate of traffic deaths per 100 million vehicle kilometres — the total distance travelled by all vehicles.

Transport ministry officials said the 1972 Canadian death rate was 6.5 for every 100 million miles driven.

Barrett Keeps 'Em Hopping

A piece of legislation, which at first appeared to meet with the approval of all parties in the legislature, caused the NDP government to carry Wednesday's sitting well past the usual 11 p.m. adjournment hour — for the first time.

And then Premier Barrett ordered an unprecedented 9 a.m. sitting of the house today, leaving members only nine and one half hours between sittings.

The house has been meeting at 10 a.m. weekdays on a fairly regular basis for the past three weeks.

The legislature Wednesday was debating the principle of the Development Corporation of B.C. Act, and while no speaker said he would vote against the principle of the bill, several said, in fact, their parties would vote for it.

The debate carried on for almost three hours, with the sitting adjourning at 11:25 p.m.

Early stages of the debate indicated the opposition parties in the house would all be supporting the legislation. But later speakers, notably Socred Bob McClelland, made comments about the legislation which prompted Barrett to enter the debate at about 11:10 p.m.

Despite the fact Barrett has maintained a policy of not making the house sit past 11 p.m., he made no move to adjourn the debate until today. Adjournment was finally moved by Jim Chabot (SC-Columbia River) at 11:25.

Declaring Tory support for the legislation, Conservative House leader Scott Wallace called the bill a "very sound, good, sensible" bill.

But Garde Gardom (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) said his party's chief concern centres on the bill's provision for the government to participate directly in any enteprise through purchasing shares in any company. Such powers could easily result in the corporation becoming a "patronage vehicle," he said.

Gardom urged the government to exercise great caution before acquiring equity in business, and to do so only after thorough research and investigation, including study of cost projections.

"I don't understand how the government could take a good idea and completely emasculate it by its insistence on intruding into the private sector through every move it makes," said Bob McClelland (SC-Langley).

He termed the bill "crackpot legislation brought in by a slot-machine government."

The government, he said, "seems bent on finding any excuse to cut out private enterprise and then move in and pick up the pieces."

The bill is offering a "fantastic opportunity to blow the savings of the taxpayers of the province," McClelland said. He pointed to the example of Manitoba, where the taxpayers of the province are having to pay $1 million a month to bail out the Manitoba development corporation."

Soon the government in B.C. would have no businesses left but losers in which to invest money.

"I suggest the taxpayer of B.C. will be the biggest loser of all," he added.

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace River) said he doesn't understand why it is considered necessary to "stuff feathers in the pillow of small business" and "entice" people to enter some form of business in a resource-rich province like B.C.

Barrett described the Socred attacks on the legislation as "a great deal of puffed-up claptrap."

The opposition MLAs had earlier pleaded with the government to give some special assistance to help solve the problems of the north, such as the provision of an alfalfa cubing plant, yet now they were condemning the first legislative step toward achieving such aid.

"This is politics. It's fair game," Barrett said. But he promised the next time he visited the northern part of the province he would tell residents there what their Socred MLAs had said.

Every minute spent stalling on the legislation was time wasted in getting help to northern farmers through the legislation, he warned.

"Do you want to help the small people of the province or don't you?"

He said the object of the legislation is to provide assistance on a regional basis or an industry basis, to ensure "rational development" of secondary industry in the province. He said it was absurd to suggest the corporation would be subject to political influence.

He expected every MLA to put forward to the development corporation suggestions and proposals from his constituency on how aid to industry could be provided.

Although Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) said the legislation contains a "veiled threat of control" and could well be "the death rattle for private enterprise in B.C.," she said the Social Credit party would vote for it.

Jordan suggested the government provide $50 million in investment funds for the development corporation instead of the $25 million stipulated in the legislation.

"The money is there," she said. "Put it in quickly before it's all spent."

In moving second reading of the legislation, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said the Socreds had, in a "deathbed repentance," advocated support for a development corporation in B.C.

He said the intention of the development corporation is to "advance and enhance the prospects of medium and small businessmen as well as protect the small investors' outlay."

He said the development corporation is needed to take full advantage of industrial aid programs sponsored by the federal government and, on occasion, to supplement those programs.

Canadians Preferred

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Midwest congressman, arguing in favor of moving Alaska oil through a Canadian pipeline, said Wednesday "I would rather trust . . . Canadians than . . . some nabob in the Middle East."

Representative John Anderson, a Republican, told a House of Representatives subcommittee that without Alaskan oil, "the Midwest will be dependent on the whims of Middle East oil producers for more than 50 per cent of its total petroleum supply."

He outlined the rich resources of the Arab states and added: "The effect of these kinds of resources, coupled with ideological fervor and nationalistic pride, enabled Libya to force oil companies to increase oil royalties by 120 per cent between 1969 and 1971.

"The ruler of Libya, Col. Mummar Gaddafi, further states that he now decides foreign economic policy on two criteria — will Islam be helped and will Israel be harmed? The potential for political blackmail is obvious."

Anderson was speaking in favor of a pipeline from the North Slope of Alaska, through Edmonton and south into the United States, touching on the fact that such a route would be under Canadian control.

"I would much rather trust administration of that pipeline to Canadians," he said, "than to some nabob in the Middle East who might decide to turn off the spiggot because he didn't agree with some point of U.S. foreign policy."

The subcommittee, essentially, was studying the question of right-of-way across public lands—specifically as it affects the court-stalled trans-Alaska pipeline.

With the pipe for the line rusting in Alaska and suertankers slipping one-by-one down the shipyard ways, the pipeline is hung up over a court decision that it would violate a 50-year-old provision of the Mineral Leasing Act restricting right of way to 54 feet. The Alaska line would require several times that.

The congressman were united only on the premise that the right-of-way laws must be changed to permit the oil to flow as soon as possible.

Representative Don Young, a Republican from Alaska, said his state was becoming desperate over the delays and that it "will be broke — bankrupt" if oil is not flowing inside two years.

Oil was discovered on the North Slope in 1968. The trans-Alaska line is proposed to run 800 miles to Valdez, an ice-free port on the panhandle, from where supertankers would carry the oil south along the British Columbia coast to refineries in Washington State.

TREATMENT PLANT OPENS SATURDAY

The Sidney sewerage treatment plant will be officially opened Saturday.

Capital Regional District officials announced Wednesday that Sidney Mayor Stan Dear, regional board chairman Jim Campbell and others, will participate at 2:30 p.m. when a button will be pressed to activate the $1.26 million plant on Fifth Street.

The new plant will provide secondary treatment and has a capacity of 500,000 gallons of sewage a day.

Warm April Day Needed For Cleaning the Pool

A warm day in mid April is a good time for cleaning out a waterlily pool, and for planting new roots of the lilies.

Small pools are dealt with by working from around the rim, on hands and knees if necessary, or by crouching on a broad plank wedged securely across a segment of the pool.

Either way it's an uncomfortable job, so make the best of it by wearing old clothes you won't worry about getting slimy or muddy.

I know some people use household rubber gloves to protect the hands (from what?) but bare fingers are more sensitive for feeling roots and the little knobs of flower buds.

Almost any pool will have a certain amount of debris in the water, and it is the removal of this which is the main object of the April immersion. Grass clippings, leaves and discarded pieces of the waterlilies themselves make up the debris.

The material hauled from the pool should be put into an old pail for it is useful for pouring over the compost heap.

Diluted with more water, it can be poured around a large acid-loving shrub needing a good drink.

With the waterlily plants just showing new leaf growth you can divide the roots if the pool was becoming crowded last year. A crowded pool will gradually produce fewer blooms because of lack of sunlight on the water resulting in the water being too cool.

You may have planned another pool near a patio and this is an opportunity to furnish it with a lovely flowering plant.

Haul out a root with its top growth, handling it gently yet firmly for the roots will be completely matted. Try not to break either the leaf stems or the flower stems. You will feel the small round flower buds with your fingers down low on the crowns.

The pulling apart of waterlily plants is a tough job — you need at least one crown growth with each set of roots. Sometimes a sharp knife is needed, though pulling apart ensures roots and leaves belong to each other.

A warm air temperature is desirable but it presents the hazard of drying the lily roots and leaves. Pieces of plant should be immersed in a pan or pail of water as soon as detached.

The soil in a small pool should be of well rotted compost, leafmould and some bonemeal. Rampant growth is undesirable for the more leaf growth for the size of pool, the less number of flowers.

There must be open water surface to allow sun to warm the water. This is essential to waterlilies, and to most acquatics.

In years when division of plants is either impossible or undesirable, removing some of the leaves will serve the purpose of opening up the pool to more light and sun.

Top up the pool at once after cleaning or replanting. Cloudy water will usually clear within 24 hours.

If a pool becomes filmed with a green slime in dry warm weather an application of potassium permanganate will clear it in one or two doses a couple of weeks apart. This is the familiar Condy's Fluid used as a mouth wash and throat gargle not so long ago.

Use only a few grains of the crystals to treat a small pool, or one ounce to 25,000 gallons of water. In this dilution is a safe fungicide, harmless to plants and fish.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In theory, a defender slipped in his defense against South's game contract in today's deal. Actually, however, it would be difficult to fault that defender for his play. Can you find the defensive "error" and bring it to light? Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

◇ 10 9 4
♣ A 6 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ◇.

West found the best opening lead of a diamond, and South played low from dummy. East's queen capturing the trick. To trick two East led the club king, which was permitted to win. East next led the club queen, South's ace winning.

Three rounds of trumps then followed, picking up the outstanding pieces. Now came declarer's singleton spade, dummy's jack winning when West declined to take his ace. The queen of spades was then played, South discarding the six of clubs as West's ace took the trick.

West returned a diamond to dummy's ace, and on the high king of spades South tossed away his remaining losing diamond. Thus his only losers were a spade, a diamond, and a club. What was the defensive "error"?

After East had captured the opening diamond lead with his queen, he should have paused for reflection. Had he done so, he would have recognized that he wanted West in the lead. He could have accomplished this by leading his eight of clubs, rather than the king.

Actually, the lead of the club eight really couldn't be a losing play. Even if South had held the A-10-3 of clubs (instead of the A-6-3), South wouldn't play the ten-spot, for fear that East's club eight might be a singleton.

With the low club lead by East, if South played low, West's ten would win. Another diamond lead would now promote East's king into a winner. And if South captured the low club lead with his ace, he would then draw trumps. Next would come a spade, and West would take his ace. He would then lead the club ten, and East would make two club tricks.

Of course, exactly what would have happened had East led his low club at trick two is unpredictable. But the fact remains that the defenders would have had it in their power to defeat declarer.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Emotion Can Cause Weight Loss

Every so often during my life as a busy physician, I have seen women who had gone down to skin and bones, and perhaps weighed around 85 pounds.

Many of the women told me that after having gotten too heavy, they dieted to reduce, but curiously, when they got down to normal weight, they kept on dieting until they became seriously emaciated. I was interested to note that generally they remained active and unconcerned about their emaciation. In one such case, the young woman's doctor was so concerned that he had her in the mental section of a hospital.

This young woman had what we doctors call anorexta nervosa (a fancy name for loss of appetite due to nervousness).

When her doctor asked me to see her, I asked her if by chance she was trying to commit suicide, and she said, "Yes, I suppose you could call it that; you see, I am 30, and the third man who had planned to marry me recently, just left me in anger because I blew up with my bad temper. I felt that I'm never going to find another fiance, so why go on living?"

I soon talked her out of that idea, and in half an hour she dressed and went back to her secretarial job. Before long, her weight was back to normal.

One of the most remarkable cases I ever saw, showing the strong influence of emotion in rapidly reducing weight was that of a deeply religious stout woman who married a man who had been divorced. Then her religious adviser told her that her only way to keep out of hell was never to let her husband into her bed. She followed his advice, but soon, when she discovered that her husband had found sexual solace elsewhere, she was so upset that she rapidly lost 50 pounds.

About all I could do to help her was to assure her that she was not suffering from any serious organic disease, and to help her to understand why the difficulties had come to her.

COUTURE PATTERN

By LOIS HOLMES

Your desire for elegant simplicity and pure femininity can be satisfied with today's patterns. The knit cardigan boasts of raglan comfort that even an amateur knitter can enjoy. Plain stockinette is relieved and bordered with garter stitch, giving it a minimum of finishing.

A dainty rose border enhances the lovely mesh Quick-Quick crochet cardigan. The mesh is easily made of single crochet and chain stitch. The mock Irish crochet rose square is equally simple and connected as you crochet. The whole strip can then be quickly sewn in place for an astonishingly charming result. Both garments are made of four-ply yarn and sizes small, medium and large are ALL given for each garment.

To order: 415-587 knit raglan and rose mesh cardigans, send $1.50 U.S. plus 15 cents for mailing for the pattern (25 cents for air mail) in cheque or money order to Lois Holmes of California, the Victoria Times, Box 1005, Gardena, Calif. 90249.

Please PRINT your name, address and pattern number plainly.

Fishing Industry Booming Off Newfoundland's Coast

By JAMES H. HUSSEY

GRAND BANK, Nfld. (CP) — The Burin Peninsula, a boot-like projection on the south coast of Newfoundland, is the best fish-producing area in Eastern Canada and prospects for the future are extremely bright, industry officials say.

Last year, filleting and freezing plants at Burin, Marystown, Grand Bank and Fortune processed approximately 175 million pounds of cod, flounder, haddock, redfish, halibut and other species.

The four plants provide about 1,400 permanent jobs on the production lines and in maintenance and at peak periods, up to 2,000 shore workers and 800 men on trawlers.

The Burin plant, owned by Fishery Products Ltd., was started in 1942 and is the oldest of the four. Through the years expansion has continued and the company has a fleet of 15 trawlers, mostly modern stern trawlers.

Three additional vessels are being built for the firm in Norway. The Burin plant operates year-round and the company has five other seasonal plants on the island.

The Burin plant is continually experimenting with new processing ideas and is becoming more labor intensive through processing cooked and breaded fish sticks, fish cakes and other quick-serve fish dishes.

OPERATIONS EXPAND

The Marystown plant, newest of the four, is owned and operated by Atlantic Fish Processors Ltd. It operates 10 trawlers and an agreement has been signed with a local shipyard to build five more.

The new vessels are expected to increase the plant's production by 50 per cent with a corresponding increase in the labor force. Like the Burin plant, the Marystown operation is year-round.

Booth Fisheries (Canada) Ltd. is expected to complete a $3.2-million expansion program at its Fortune plant this fall.

Harvey Mauger, plant manager, said the expansion will increase productivity up to 40 per cent. In addition, the firm is adding 12 modern combination vessels to its present 10-ship fleet.

The new ships will be 52 feet long and wooden-hulled. They will give jobs to between 50 and 60 men and have a catch yield potential of six million pounds of fish annually.

Bonavista Cold Storage Co. Ltd., operator of the Grand Bank plant, has almost completed a major expansion of the plant's freezing and holding facilities.

ADDING TRAWLERS

Last year the company put two new stern trawlers into service bringing to 12 vessels the fleet supplying the operation. The work force increased to 300 from 250 and the company has plans to increase its fleet further. Booth Fisheries has two other plants on the island.

During the last few years the Burin Peninsula trawlers have been picking up bumper catches of the flatfish varieties, especially yellowtails and flounder, and at times last fall the plants were unable to process all the fish taken. On one occasion a trawler had to be diverted to a Nova Scotia plant.

Self-Treatment For Hemophiliacs

BOSTON (AP) — Boston researchers have developed a program to train hemophiliacs as paramedics so they can treat themselves and cut their high medical bills almost by half.

Doctors at the Tufts University - New England Medical Centre say patients suffering from hemophilia, a disease which stops the blood from clotting, can be trained to make almost all their own therapeutic decisions without consulting their doctors.

The costs of treating hemophilia with special blood concentrates which contain clotting material runs between $10,000 and $22,000 a year on a national average.

The yearly management program at the New England Medical Centre, already the lowest in the United States at $6,000, was out by more than 45 per cent with the new program, Dr. Peter H. Levine, director of the centre's blood coagulation laboratory, told the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Hemophilia is a hereditary blood disease which affects only males and for which there is no cure.

Bilingualism on the Rocks

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian attempt to create one bilingual country from two cultures will founder soon unless something is done to give French Canadians the linguistic equality promised them, says Keith Spicer, commissioner of official languages.

"This is the crunch, the moment of credibility, of truth. We have to deliver the goods."

Spicer appeared before the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee.

He repeated earlier statements that French-speaking Canadians are becoming skeptical about the promises made them by the federal government of equal status in the public service.

He said they receive neither equal service in their language nor are they given equal opportunity for employment.

Their skepticism is "not only real but deepening," he said.

Spicer cited as an example appointments to the public service. He said that during 1972, 75 per cent of the persons appointed to the public service were unilingual English, 11 per cent were French and 7.6 per cent were bilingual.

"The French language is still not getting a fair shake in the public service."

He said it is 10 times harder for a person speaking French to work for the government than it is for an English-speaking person.

Spicer's responsibility is to ensure the implementation of the Official Languages Act, passed by Parliament in 1969.

Spicer told the committee the government had better "do something pretty convincing in the next two or three years" if it wants to retain the confidence of French-speaking Canadians. Mr. Spicer blames the federal government, "including myself," for the situation. He said there has not been sufficient progress in fulfilling federal promises.

Even the adverse reaction among English-speaking Canadians to federal bilingualism is the fault of the government, he said, because it has not made efforts to explain its bilingualism policy to them.

Family Structure No Cure-All

REGINA (CP) — The traditional family structure is not automatically good, delegates to the 19th annual meeting of the Saskatchwan branch of the Canadian Public Health Association were told Wednesday.

Dr. R. E. DuWors, professor of sociology at the university of Calgary, said the relationship between the family and individual members may be destructive as well as helpful. It was a fallacy to assume the family was the most important social agent in society.

Psychiatrists often send problem children and those in trouble with the law back to the family as a form of therapy, said DuWors, although often the same family atmosphere caused the problem in the first place.

"There is not a bit of evidence to prove there is any particular social structure which automatically produces people of sound social health," he said. "People probably would crack up even in Heaven."

N-PLANT BLAMED FOR DEATH HIKE

OCEAN TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Infant mortality rates have increased by as much as 10 times and cancer rates 31 per cent since 1960 in communities surrounding a Pennsylvania nuclear power plant, a Pittsburgh University scientist says.

Dr. Ernest J. Sternglass, a professor of radiological physics, quoted the statistics Wednesday to a meeting of Ocean County residents opposed to the construction of a nuclear power plant at Forked River, N.J.

Sternglass said the figures were based on a two-year study by the Pennsylvania health department, which surveyed communities in the vicinity of the nuclear plant at Shippington, Pa.

The study indicated that infant mortality in nearby Midland Township had increased tenfold since the plant was constructed, Sternglass said.

The professor also said the figures showed that cancer cases in Beaver County, where the plant is located, increased 31 per cent in 1970 while increasing nine per cent in the rest of the state.

In addition, the ability of cows in the area to reproduce appeared to be affected and milk given by the cows contained increased levels of strontium-90, a byproduct of nuclear fission, Sternglass said.

Cold Wave Hits Crops

Times News Services

Freezing temperatures struck the southern U.S. today, causing widespread damage to fruit and vegetable crops and bringing predictions of higher prices.

Record April lows dipped into North Carolina and Florida only a day after intense cold damaged orchard and field crops from Southern Illinois to Arkansas and Alabama.

Alabama's peach crop was hard hit as the temperature skidded to 26 early today at Birmingham. Up to 75 per cent of the tomato crop in Arkansas may be wiped out, officials said.

Reports of freeze damage to Southern Illinois fruit crops, already hit by flooding, poured in Wednesday and experts said the cold snap had brought what appeared to be the biggest fruit kill since 1955.

"It looks like 95 per cent of the peaches are gone and from 50 to 75 per cent of the apples," said James West, a supply manager for the Illinois Fruit Growers Exchange.

One peach grower said his crop was a 100 per cent loss — "We can't find one live bud."

The last hay drop operations in southwestern Colorado were completed in an effort to feed cattle stranded by heavy snow.

As temperatures moved into the 60s, burying cattle killed by severe weather became a top priority.

Damage estimates to cattle herds and new calves ranged up to $14 million in Colorado alone. As many as half the 48,000 calves born before the storm are thought to have died.

Meanwhile in Washington a newly-formed U.S. consumer group Wednesday laid plans for continued meat boycotts and a national day of protest against food prices next month.

The National Consumers Congress called for an indefinite halt to all meat buying and eating on Tuesdays and Thursdays and set May 5 as a national day of protest.

In Windsor, Ont., the U.S. group's Canadian counterpart, Citizens' Consumer Movement, also met Wednesday and decided to stage a mass demonstration against high food costs and a boycott of stores not co-operating in holding prices down.

In Toronto, the price of steaks and roasts dropped six cents a pound Wednesday in some supermarkets and ground beef went down five cents a pound to 89 cents.

Spokesmen for other food retailers downgraded the possibility of a meat price war but said they will be competitive.

TOP TORY QUITS

OTTAWA (CP) — Liam O'Brian, 44, national director of the Conservative Party since October, 1970, has resigned to take a position in his former firm, the Canada Trust Co.

He said the decision in no way reflected a poor party showing in recent opinion polls and that he would stay if a federal election was called in June.

Danger Pay On QE2

SOUTHAMPTON (AP) — Crew members aboard the Cunard luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 said Thursday the company had offered them danger money of £50 (about $125) for a cruise to Israel.

The liner, docked at Southampton amidst the tightest security precautions seen at a British port in peacetime, will leave for Israel Sunday.

Aboard will be 1,700 Jews from the United States, Europe and Britain who will join in the 25th anniversary celebrations of the founding of Israel when the QE2 docks at Haifa.

The security has been laid on in case Arab terrorists try to bomb the ship or attack passengers during the voyage.

Crew members said the danger bonus offer had been pinned up on notice boards in their quarters. They said the company was also guaranteeing four years' wages in compensation to the families of any crew member killed by terrorists.

Cunard spokesmen declined to confirm or deny that a cash offer had been made.

The QE2 is sealed off from outsiders at Southampton's ocean terminal.

The 65,863-ton QE2 docked here Wednesday night after picking up passengers in New York and at Cherbourg, France.

Navy frogmen have checked the harbor and the liner's hull for mines and the ship has been searched from stem to stern for planted explosives.

The British defence ministry which tried to persuade Cunard to call off the cruise is posting armed guards and bomb disposal experts aboard for the voyage.

The Magnificent 7

Times News Services

TORONTO — Seven pensioners, the youngest 64, beat back two armed robbers in a Washington hotel using a pole, a whisky bottle and a shoe.

Two of the Toronto holidayers narrowly escaped death from the gunmen's bullets. Two were treated at hospital and later released.

The elderly travellers and Gerry Small, 29, driver of the Trailways coach which had taken them on a weekend cherry blossom tour to Washington, were chatting in Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Wheeler's second-floor Holiday Inn bedroom when two gun-waving intruders burst in.

Margaret Fraser, 72, and Margaret Cosway, 67, were leaving the group. Mrs. Fraser was struck on the neck with a gun butt and thrown down the hallway. Mrs. Cosway was shoved back into the room and on to a chesterfield.

The thugs ordered everyone to lie on their stomachs. Only one obeyed — driver Small.

As one of the youthful gunmen pushed a .22-calibre revolver into Small's back and started searching him, John Baker, 69, picked up a shoe and knocked the gun from his hand.

The other gunman fired at Gordon Brown, 76, who collapsed from a heart attack — his eighth. The bullet lodged in a shoe belonging to Elsie Wheeler, 72.

She grabbed a hollow metal pole from a partition fixture and beat the gunmen's head and shoulders.

"I just went berserk," she said. "I later collapsed on my bed."

Husband Ernie Wheeler, 73, was advancing to get his share of the action when another shot rang out from five feet — missing him.

Baker then picked up a whisky bottle and ran after the retreating robbers.

The gunmen escaped with $480 from driver Small and $184 from Mrs. Cosway. As they left they pushed Edith Baker, 64, against a chair, inflicting deep bruises.

None of the travellers slept that night. Gordon Brown and Margaret Fraser were released after treatment in Washington's Providence Hospital.

Stewart Dow, a Trailways marketing officer who flew into Washington after hearing of the fracas, said Wednesday night the area in which the hotel was situated had deteriorated "far sooner than we thought it could" in the past six months.

He said that only seven or eight months ago, when last inspected, the hotel was in a highly-respected residential area.

"I was really surprised to see the change."

Cambodia Crisis Talks Held

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon called in his top military, diplomatic and intelligence advisers today for consultations on the worsening situation in Cambodia. Continued U.S. bombing there has caused growing congressional objections.

In Phnom Penh today a crisis atmosphere prevailed as more than 50 Western diplomats and their families left the capital in anticipation of an all-out attack on the city by Communist forces.

Members of the United States, Australian and British diplomatic community flew to Bangkok amid reports the attack may come within 24 hours.

OTHERS LEFT

The Japanese, Israeli and Soviet embassies carried out a similar evacuation earlier in the week in order to remove all dependents from Phnom Penh before the Buddhist New Year holiday Friday.

That is the date, military intelligence reports said, that Communist forces may hit the capital with a combined rocket and guerrilla attack.

Nixon made an early morning helicopter flight from Camp David to the White House to see his personal emissary to Cambodia and meet the National Security Council.

Gen. Alexander Haig, who made a four-day on-the-scene inspection for the president in Cambodia as well as visiting other key capitals in Southeast Asia, arrived back in Washington several hours before dawn and was on hand at the White House when Nixon returned.

HELP SOUGHT

Cambodia's President Lon Nol was reported Wednesday to have requested the help of South Vietnamese troops and planes to fight communist forces which have taken over much of his country and threaten Phnom Penh.

A final decision on any plea for help in Cambodia was not likely before the return to Saigon of President Nguyen Van Thieu from his visit to the U.S. and five European and Asian countries. He is due back Saturday.

On Capitol Hill, Sen William Fulbright, (D-Ark.) condemned the U.S. bombing as based on specific legal arguments and likened the administration's justification of it to continued U.S. intervention in Vietnam after the Gulf of Tonkin resolution was repealed.

Some members of Congress have expressed growing concern that the bombing could lead to a new and deeper U.S. involvement in Indochina although it has pulled out of Vietnam. The administration contends that the Communist attacks in Cambodia are a violation of the Jan. 28 ceasefire.

Heavy combat raged on six major fronts within a 15-mile radius of Phnom Penh and all supply lines feeding the capital remain cut or inperiled by Communists almost encircling the city.

Despite 36 consecutive days of heavy U.S. bombing, with B-52 bombers and jet fighter-bomber strikes now averaging 220 a day, Communists have relinquished little territory and have choked off all but one of the five supply highways leading into the capital.

Slain Arabs Buried

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Palestinian guerrillas carrying submachineguns on their backs marched through the streets of Beirut today behind the coffins of their three leaders slain Tuesday by an Israeli assassination squad that struck into the heart of Beirut.

There were chants of "with blood we will revenge you" and a pledge by religious leaders that "we will carry the torch of the Palestinian revolution even into heaven." The sounds of rifle fire — a traditional Arab form of mourning — sounded from the rooftops.

There were massive anti-Israeli demonstrations with anti-American overtones in Damascus, Kuwait and Cairo.

Witnesses estimated the crowds lining the route to the cemetery numbered upwards of 50,000. The turnout of mourners was considerably short of Beirut press predictions, some of which ranged as high as 200,000. They had expected the demonstrations to be greater than those that came upon the death of Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser in 1970.

Guerrillas in cars and Land Rovers cut a wedge through the sea of people lining the three-mile route to the cemetery. A guerrilla band

Japan Sticks to Deadline

Times News Services

Japan will not follow the U.S. lead in granting auto makers an extra year to meet 1975 pollution control standards, Japanese government officials said today.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday gave automobile makers an additional year to produce new cars meeting the 1975 standards for engine exhausts.

But Takeo Miki, director of Japan's Environmental Agency, said: "We are sticking to our fixed policy because of the serious environmental pollution in Japan."

In Washington, an Environmental Protection Agency official says EPA's little-noticed deserition of 1976 nitrogen-oxide limits in automobile exhausts is far more significant than its delay in forcing abatement of the two other pollutants.

If Congress accepts EPA's views, auto makers may have to provide little or no control of nitrogen oxide beyond that already applied to today's cars.

Meanwhile, government and industry sources say Californians will have to spend at least $200 more for their 1975 model cars because of the decision to impose interim state standards.

The catalytic devices required for most cars will have to be replaced after 25,000 miles of driving at a cost of between $50 and $75.

Goods Hoarded

TOKYO (Reuter) — Six of Japan's biggest trading companies were accused in parliament Wednesday of hoarding basic commodities and using their immense wealth to make huge profits through speculation.

Representatives of Mitsubishi, Mitsui, C. Itoh, Sumitomo, Marubeni and Nissho Iwai were questioned throughout the day by opposition members of a lower-house committee investigating price rises.

A trade ministry report last week accused the six companies of making huge profits from speculative trading in stocks, land, wool, cotton, silk, soybeans and timber.

Trade Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone warned the six the government would not tolerate such activities to the detriment of the people's welfare.

Several of the company presidents told their interrogators they are engaged in "self-reflection" about their activities and are drawing up criteria for future conduct of trading operations. But they denied hoarding to force up market prices.

GUERRILLAS DEMANDING $1.5 MILLION

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Argentine left-wing urban guerrillas demand a ransom equivalent to $1.5 million for kidnapped British businessman Francis Brimicombe, unofficial reports said today.

The reported ransom conditions are the same as those met by the Kodak Photographic Co. for Anthony da Cruz, an executive of the Argentine Kodak affiliate, released Saturday after five days in captivity.

New Breed of H-Addict Evolves

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Canada's almost-epidemic heroin problem now involves what the head of the federal health protection branch in Ottawa describes as a "different breed" of addict.

And the new breed of heroin addict is not only considerably younger and better educated than the stereotype "criminal heroin addict" of a few years ago, according to Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy health minister in charge of the HPD — the new addict seems, more importantly, to have lost "the fear of heroin."

Federal health authorities, as a result, are becoming increasingly concerned that the country's changing and rapidly-expanding heroin problem must be dealt with in a new and better way.

The latest heroin conviction statistics recently published by the bureau of dangerous drugs appears to support Morrison's comments. Heroin convictions during 1972 reached 923, up almost 85 per cent from the previous year's number. Alberta experienced the most significant jump, involving a 375 per cent increase compared to 1971, followed by similar large increases in Quebec and Saskatchewan.

B.C. remained the centre of the problem, with 63 per cent of the convictions, followed by Ontario with 17 per cent and Alberta with almost 15 per cent.

More important perhaps, one-third of those convicted for heroin offences last year were between the ages of 21 and 24, according to the statistics. An additional 23 per cent were between 18 and 20 and another 19 per cent were between 25 and 29 years of age.

Morrison in an interview added that the statistics reveal that the new breed of young addicts tend to be multiple drug users, in contrast with the old-school addict who usually used only heroin.

In fact, there is considerable evidence that the young heroin users take heroin as a part of a much larger drug experimentation that involves "speed," cannabis and other hallucinogens such as LSD.

The bureau of dangerous drugs, in its latest statistics, estimates there are almost 9,000 "known" narcotic addicts in Canada, 86 per cent of them using principally heroin. This compares with the more realistic estimate, Morrison agrees, of the LeDain Commission that Canada has between 12,000 and 15,000 narcotic addicts.

UVic Huddles On Desperate Money Problem

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

University of Victoria president Dr. Hugh Farquhar called a general meeting of faculty and administrative staff for 2 p.m. this afternoon at which he is expected to discuss the university's acute financial problems.

Farquhar is expected to give a "state of the nation" address on the university and may disclose which areas are going to suffer budget cutbacks, a source on UVic's administrative staff said today.

The university is facing a projected deficit of nearly $1 million between its operating budget for 1973 and the government grant it expects to get.

The Times tried to reach Farquhar this morning to ask how the university will meet this deficit, but Farquhar's secretary said he was too busy today to talk to the press.

She phoned back however, to say that Farquhar had instructed her to say that he did not know what areas of the university would be affected by cutbacks.

STRONG STATEMENT

At Wednesday evening's UVic senate meeting, Farquhar again warned senate members of the lack of money this year for any new programs, such as child care or law.

"I can't say strongly enough how serious the financial situation in the university is," he said.

"We have to find approximately $1 million so we can function at all this year," Farquhar added.

Board of governors chairman David Angus said today there will have to be cutbacks in some existing programs to meet the projected deficit.

"We have been having some communication with the minister of education explaining our position," he said. The board of governors has also discussed with the possibility of getting supplementary grants to fund the new programs planned, he said.

Angus said there are few alternative sources of money the university can turn to besides the provincial government.

"It would be entirely self-defeating to increase student fees," he said. UVic's enrolment has been dropping in recent years.

UVic's financial plight has been the theme of most of Farquhar's public speeches in recent months.

As guest speaker at a Canadian Red Cross society luncheon Monday, which was attended by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, Farquhar "urgently appealed to the government" to come through with more money.

TERRA NOVA HOME BY LATE JUNE

The Esquimalt-based destroyer-escort HMCS Terra Nova, serving as stand-by base for Canadian troops serving on the International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam, should be home by late June.

Rear-Admiral R. H. Leir, commander maritime forces Pacific, says if necessary the Terra Nova will be relieved by HMCS Kootenay. The Kootenay would leave CFB Esquimalt about May 14. Should this happen, the Terra Nova will reach Esquimalt not later than the end of June.

Leir emphasized that the decision to relieve Terra Nova has not yet been taken.

Such a decision, he said, would be made by the federal government as the situation in South East Asia develops.

'That's How Heroin Spreads'

Disagreement with the tactics of narcotics officers is not a valid defence to a trafficking charge, Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake was told today before ordering a four-year prison term for a convicted trafficker.

Keith Alan Iverson, 22, of 1115 Collinson, was convicted of selling one cap of heroin Aug. 1 to RCMP undercover agent Blaine Froats.

Defence counsel Gordon Macdonald said "this was not a case of the accused approaching the customer."

He said Iverson was approached by Froats who gave every indication he was a user.

He was "posing as an addict," said Macdonald.

Prosecutor Michael Hutchison said Macdonald's submission "is a point which we often hear in cases of trafficking, particularly where we are dealing with a situation involving an undercover operative, as though there is something wrong with the police authorities sending undercover operators into the drug sub-culture to attempt to stop the trafficking in odious substances like heroin."

While Hutchison said there was only one cap involved in this case, "the fact of the matter is that virtually all of the trafficking in the substance at its street level will be with one or two capsules for the immediate use of a heroin user or potentially a non-user who may be using it for the first time."

"I think little turns on the fact that only one capsule of heroin was sold.

"There is no doubt that this accused himself is an addict and there's equally no doubt, I submit, that he was quite prepared to support his addiction by making available to others in the community capsules of heroin for their consumption.

"And that is how heroin spreads throughout this community, in small doses from what is colloquially known as a street pusher.

"I have the greatest sympathy for this accused. He is a man in the grip of a monster he cannot control . . . the community deserves as much sympathy as the accused."

Before sentence Drake said he was concerned simply with this particular case "and not the background."

"Nevertheless," he said, "the public interest is involved in a matter of this sort and where an offence of this kind is so prevalent as it is and is so dangerous and so grievous an offence, it is a situation where only severity is justice."

Gorst Knocks 'Commercial' Erickson Plan

Taxpayers have laid out $1 million to buy the Ocean Cement site, prime property on Victoria's Inner Harbor, on the understanding that it will be open space — not stores and apartments, Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst said today.

Gorst said he was dismayed when he viewed architect Arthur Erickson's preliminary plan for the future of the Inner Harbor.

"It just seemed to me highly commercial,"

Gorst said in an interview he was particularly upset to see a 300-400 parking space building with tier-style stores and apartments on it located where the Ocean Cement works now stands.

Apart from the site having been bought with public funds for open space purposes, Gorst said, the model showed buildings stretching north from the site as far as Johnson Street bridge, including the double-towered Reid centre.

"My first impression was that it was a completely commercial concept rather than a people thing as claimed by various parties in the matter."

"I don't see why the entire Inner Harbor and the foreshore along Wharf Street should not be simply nice, grassy banks."

Gorst, a proponent of a Provincial Capital Commission for Victoria similar to the federal National Capital Commission in Ottawa, listed the current injection of public funds into the Inner Harbor area:

— $280,000 towards a walkway beneath the Causeway fronting the Empress Hotel.

— $220,000 extra for the walkway project, hurriedly approved this week and source unknown, according to city officials.

— $1 million for the Ocean Cement site.

— $60,000 for Menzies Street landscaping.

— $90,000 for Belleville Street improvement and Laurel Point.

"The provincial government should definitely have some input into planning of this area," Gorst added.

He said Victoria city council's apparent willingness to almost double its expenditure on the current walkway project, indicated that Erikson's master-plan was "being pushed."

He said he was not convinced current plans for the foreshore were people-oriented.

"For example, it was claimed that the Reid Centre would be 85 per cent open to people — but it's a shopping centre, so why wouldn't it be open to people?"

The city should look more carefully at its downtown foreshore plans, with more involvement of the public, Gorst said, noting he did not understand why Erickson, commissioned by the city for $35,000, felt obliged to display his ideas only to a select group of officials and businessmen.

In particular, the original purpose in buying the Ocean Cement site should not be forgotten, he said.

He added that he intends to speed up his advocacy of a provincial capital commission, because things are developing so quickly in the area.

City Offered Backup Help

Garden City Ambulance has offered Victoria council 24-hour emergency backup support for the city's proposed new ambulance service.

In a brief scheduled for submission to city council at 2 p.m. today, company president J. R. Knezacky says while the municipalities of Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt operate with only one ambulance, "their combined emergency calls do not equal those of the city of Victoria."

Garden City, therefore, is "prepared to enter into a contract for the very vital backup service that is required."

The ambulance firm has provided emergency service for the city since 1968 and now has three ambulances at its disposal.

The new service, scheduled to take over July 1 when the Garden City contract has expired, will be operated jointly by the city and Victoria General Hospital and use only one ambulance.

Knezacky's brief says the city of Victoria cannot at any time feel that in an emergency where more than one ambulance is required it can always count on help from private or other municipal services.

"They could be either too busy or too late to aid in a City of Victoria emergency.

"And in the case of the other three municipalities, if they were able to help Victoria, their municipalities would be without an ambulance service."

Knezacky would not say how much an emergency backup service would cost the city but says it would have to be worked out on a year-to-year contract basis, since without an established arrangement, the firm could not afford to keep a fully-staffed ambulance on duty for city emergencies.

Knezacky said he agrees government supported regional ambulance service must be developed eventually but even then private firms will still be necessary and will probably receive government subsidies.

Meanwhile, the nine employees of Garden City were also scheduled to approach city council this afternoon to as for a two-week postponement of council's final decision to establish the new ambulance service.

At the end of two weeks the ambulance drivers say they will submit an alternative proposal to council which will provide better ambulance service than the municipal-hospital scheme and costing no more than the $110,000 estimated for that scheme.

In a brief delivered Wednesday to the residence of assistant city manager Colin Crisp the ambulance drivers say their proposal will work on a system of two-vehicle coverage during the day and one-vehicle with a bac-up unit at night.

The non-profit service would be controlled by the city as a public utility and provide training standards equal to those of Metropolitan Ambulance service in Vancouver.

Money Sought To Save Centre

Victoria Teachers' Project has appealed to the provincial government's special children's committee for money to save its learning assistance centre.

For a year and a half the centre, now located at Beacon Hill School, has been funded through Local Initiative Programs at a cost of about $100,000 a year.

But school director Bill Benson fears the project won't receive L.I.P. money this year and even if it does the federal grant is not large enough to provide the kind of top-notch facilities desired.

The budget Benson has submitted to the children's committee requests a total of $150,000 to $180,000 to continue the program with the same amount of staff or $306,000 to expand to 20 teachers.

The school has 12 full-time teachers who work on a one-to-one basis with 60 students needing special assistance with learning problems.

But the teachers make as little as one-half the salary they would receive in the Victoria school system.

Money is also short for books, audio-visual aids and equipment.

Last winter during the cold snap the school ran out of coal.

Benson thinfs the school is providing a vital service to children who can't get the extra help they need in regular classrooms — a service which would cost $360 a month if parents were forced to pay expenses.

He says local school boards have co-operated with the project, which operates daily and often at nights and on Saturdays, but the boards are not able to help with financing.

There is a waiting list of 18 to get into the school and Benson says about 200 children in the area need this individual type of learning assistance.

Clam Diggers Face Big Fine In Closed Areas

Any person found digging clams in Esquimalt Lagoon or in any other area designated as contaminated can be fined up to $1,000, a federal fisheries officer warned today.

His warning follows a federal health department order issued a month ago closing a number of clam digging areas on Vancouver Island due to pollution.

"There appears to be still some people who are not aware of the order," the official said. "We have stopped many people from digging clams in Esquimalt Lagoon. They face the possibility of a fine if they continue to do so."

He said clam digging on the east side of the Saanich Peninsula is also forbidden.

Cook Beaten, Robbed of $341

A 36-year-old Armed Forces cook was beaten and robbed of $341 in a parking lot late Wednesday night

Cpl. Lloyd Steinaker said today he was on his way to collect his car and drive back to the Pat Bay base shortly after midnight.

Two men in their early twenties attacked him, knocked him to the ground and stole his wallet with $341 inside.

JUNE 1 DEADLINE for completion of work to widen Parson's Bridge to four lanes in time for peak summer traffic may involve night shifts for Dura Construction Ltd. workers. Night work would permit complete closure of the present two-lane span giving workers more elbow room. 21% Hike Accepted

Inside staff at City Hall voted Wednesday night to accept a new two-year contract providing an increase of just over 21 per cent in salaries.

Ian Fraser, president of Local 388 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said both the bargaining committee and executive recommended acceptance and the membership supported this with "a good majority."

The agreement also provides some changes in contract language and a survey of job reclassifications, he said.

City council was to make its decision at its regular meeting this afternoon.

Labor, Bosses to Speak Freely

A top-level labor-management conference will be held behind closed doors Friday and Saturday in the Empress Hotel.

The conference, organized by the labor department and originally scheduled for Harrison Hot Springs, may extend into Sunday.

It is being held privately so that labor and management spokesmen can speak freely with labor department officials and three special advisers appointed earlier by the government to review legislation and consider and recommend changes.

Labor Minister Bill King has stressed that the government will not introduce major changes in labor legislation until after conferences such as this.

This would indicate that changes will be legislated at the fall sitting of the legislature.

The government's three advisors are Noel Hall, director of the institute of industrial relations at the University of B.C., James Matkin, a UBC law professor, and Donald McTaggart, a Vancouver lawyer.

The advisers, King and labor department officials will meet Friday with Canadian unions outside the B.C. Federation of Labor, including the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada and Christian Labor Association of Canada, and with management.

On Saturday, there will be discussions with B.C. Federation of Labor officials, on behalf of the affiliated unions, and with the Teamsters Union and the Hospital Employees Union, as well as management representatives.

N-PLANT BLAMED FOR DEATH HIKE

OCEAN TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Infant mortality rates have increased by as much as 10 times and cancer rates 31 per cent since 1960 in communities surrounding a Pennsylvania nuclear power plant, a Pittsburgh University scientist says.

Dr. Ernest J. Sternglass, a professor of radiological physics, quoted the statistics Wednesday to a meeting of Ocean County residents opposed to the construction of a nuclear power plant at Forked River, N.J.

Sternglass said the figures were based on a two-year study by the Pennsylvania health department, which surveyed communities in the vicinity of the nuclear plant at Shippington, Pa.

The study indicated that infant mortality in nearby Midland Township had increased tenfold since the plant was constructed, Sternglass said.

The professor also said the figures showed that cancer cases in Beaver County, where the plant is located, increased 31 per cent in 1970 while increasing nine per cent in the rest of the state.

In addition, the ability of cows in the area to reproduce appeared to be affected and milk given by the cows contained increased levels of strontium-90, a byproduct of nuclear fission, Sternglass said.

Cambodia Crisis Talks Held

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon called in his top military, diplomatic and intelligence advisers today for consultations on the worsening situation in Cambodia. Continued U.S. bombing there has caused growing congressional objections.

In Phnom Penh today a crisis atmosphere prevailed as more than 50 Western diplomats and their families left the capital in anticipation of an all-out attack on the city by Communist forces.

Members of the United States, Australian and British diplomatic community flew to Bangkok amid reports the attack may come within 24 hours.

OTHERS LEFT

The Japanese, Israeli and Soviet embassies carried out a similar evacuation earlier in the week in order to remove all dependents from Phnom Penh before the Buddhist New Year holiday Friday.

That is the date, military intelligence reports said, that Communist forces may hit the capital with a combined rocket and guerrilla attack.

Nixon made an early morning helicopter flight from Camp David to the White House to see his personal emissary to Cambodia and meet the National Security Council.

Gen. Alexander Haig, who made a four-day on-the-scene inspection for the president in Cambodia as well as visiting other key capitals in Southeast Asia, arrived back in Washington several hours before dawn and was on hand at the White House when Nixon returned.

HELP SOUGHT

Cambodia's President Lon Nol was reported Wednesday to have requested the help of South Vietnamese troops and planes to fight Communist forces which have taken over much of his country and threaten Phnom Penh.

A final decision on any plea for help in Cambodia was not likely before the return to Saigon of President Nguyen Van Thieu from his visit to the U.S. and five European and Asian countries. He is due back Saturday.

On Capitol Hill, Sen William Fulbright, (D—Ark.), condemned the U.S. bombing as based on specific legal arguments and likened the administration's justification of it to continued U.S. intervention in Vietnam after the Gulf of Tonkin resolution was repealed.

Some members of Congress have expressed growing concern that the bombing could lead to a new and deeper U.S. involvement in Indochina although it has pulled out of Vietnam. The administration contends that the Communist attacks in Cambodia are a violation of the Jan. 28 ceasefire.

Heavy combat raged on six major fronts within a 15-mile radius of Phnom Penh and all supply lines feeding the capital remain cut or imperiled by Communists almost encircling the city.

Despite 36 consecutive days of heavy U.S. bombing, with B-52 bombers and jet fighter-bomber strikes now averaging 220 a day, Communists have relinquished little territory and have choked off all but one of the five supply highways leading into the capital.

Cold Wave Hits Crops

Times News Services

Freezing temperatures struck the southern U.S. today, causing widespread damage to fruit and vegetable crops and bringing predictions of higher prices.

Record April lows dipped into North Carolina and Florida only a day after intense cold damaged orchard and field crops from Southern Illinois to Arkansas and Alabama.

Alabama's peach crop was hard hit as the temperature skidded to 26 early today at Birmingham. Up to 75 per cent of the tomato crop in Arkansas may be wiped out, officials said.

Reports of freeze damage to Southern Illinois fruit crops, already hit by flooding, poured in Wednesday and experts said the cold snap had brought what appeared to be the biggest fruit kill since 1955.

The last hay drop operations in southwestern Colorado were completed in an effort to feed cattle stranded by heavy snow.

As temperatures moved into the 60s, burying cattle killed by severe weather, became a top priority.

Damage estimates to cattle herds and new calves ranged up to $14 million in Colorado alone. As many as half the 48,000 calves born before the storm are thought to have died.

Meanwhile in Washington a newly-formed U.S. consumer group Wednesday laid plans for continued meat boycotts and a national day of protest against food prices next month.

The National Consumers Congress called for an indefinite halt to all meat buying and eating on Tuesdays and Thursdays and set May 5 as a national day of protest.

In Windsor, Ont., the U.S. group's Canadian counterpart, Citizens' Consumer Movement, also met Wednesday and decided to stage a mass demonstration against high food costs and a boycott of stores not co-operating in holding prices down.

TOP TORY QUITS

OTTAWA (CP) — Liam O'Brien, 44, national director of the Conservative Party since October, 1970, has resigned to take a position in his former firm, the Canada Trust Co.

He said the decision in no way reflected a poor party showing in recent opinion polls and that he would stay if a federal election was called in June.

Turner Sees 7% Growth

OTTAWA (CP) — Real growth in the economy is expected to hit seven per cent in 1973 and lead to a significant drop in unemployment, Finance Minister John Turner said in a general review of economic developments.

The review, tabled in the Commons, said measures in Mr. Turner's Feb. 19 budget will maintain upward economic momentum that has been apparent since September last year.

"Numbers employed are expected to increase by approximately 300,000 in the course of the year."

The 184-page document said a seven-per-cent real growth rate would be "clearly in excess of the potential growth rate of the economy and lead to a significant reduction in unemployment." Real growth is the measure of economic expansion with inflation factors stripped away.

"If real growth amounts to seven per cent, as now seems most likely, unemployment will decline, but the rate of its decline will depend upon the trend of participation rates and the readiness of people seeking work to accept jobs which are available.

"Prices in Canada will rise less than they would have done in the absence of the budget measures, but the upward trend in wholesale prices has not yet been fully reflected in consumer prices.

"The private sector's response to the budget measures in the setting of prices and the negotiation of wages will be a major factor influencing price developments in 1973."

The Magnificent 7

TORONTO — Seven pensioners, the youngest 64, beat back two armed robbers in a Washington hotel using a pole, a whisky bottle and a shoe.

Two of the Toronto holidayers narrowly escaped death from the gunmen's bullets. Two were treated at hospital and later released.

The elderly travellers and Gerry Small, 29, driver of the Trailways coach which had taken them on a weekend cherry blossom tour to Washington, were chatting in Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Wheeler's second-floor Holiday Inn hotel room when two gun-waving intruders burst in.

Margaret Fraser, 72, and Margaret Cosway, 67, were leaving the group. Mrs. Fraser was struck on the neck with a gun butt and thrown down the hallway. Mrs. Cosway was shoved back into the room and on to a chesterfield.

The thugs ordered everyone to lie on their stomachs. Only one obeyed — driver Small.

As one of the youthful gunmen pushed a .22-calibre revolver into Small's back and started searching him, John Baker, 69, picked up a shoe and knocked the gun from his hand.

The other gunman fired at Gordon Brown, 76, who collapsed from a heart attack — his eighth. The bullet lodged in a shoe belonging to Elsie Wheeler, 72.

She grabbed a hollow metal pole from a partition fixture and beat the gunmen's head and shoulders.

"I just went berserk," she said. "I later collapsed on my bed."

Husband Ernie Wheeler, 73, was advancing to get his share of the action when another shot rang out from five feet — missing him.

Baker then picked up a whisky bottle and ran after the retreating robbers.

The gunmen escaped with $480 from driver Small and $184 from Mrs. Cosway. As they left they pushed Edith Baker, 64, against a chair, inflicting deep bruises.

None of the travellers slept that night. Gordon Brown and Margaret Fraser were released after treatment in Washington's Providence Hospital.

Stewart Dow, a Trailways marketing officer who flew into Washington after hearing of the fracas, said Wednesday night the area in which the hotel was situated had deteriorated "far sooner than we thought it could" in the past six months.

He said that only seven or eight months ago, when last inspected, the hotel was in a highly-respected residential area.

"I was really surprised to see the change."

Japan Sticks to Deadline

Times News Services

Japan will not follow the U.S. lead in granting auto makers an extra year to meet 1975 pollution control standards, Japanese government officials said today.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday gave automobile makers an additional year to produce new cars meeting the 1975 standards for engine exhausts.

But Takeo Miki, director of Japan's Environmental Agency, said: "We are sticking to our fixed policy because of the serious environmental pollution in Japan."

In Washington, an Environmental Protection Agency official says EPA's little-noticed desertion of 1976 nitrogen-oxide limits in automobile exhausts is far more significant than its delay in forcing abatement of the two other pollutants.

If Congress accepts EPA's views, auto makers may have to provide little or no control of nitrogen oxide beyond that already applied to today's cars.

Meanwhile, government and industry sources say Californians will have to spend at least $200 more for their 1975 model cars because of the decision to impose interim state standards.

The catalytic devices required for most cars will have to be replaced after 25,000 miles of driving at a cost of between $50 and $75.

Slain Arabs Buried

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Palestinian guerrillas carrying submachineguns on their backs marched through the streets of Beirut today behind the coffins of their three leaders slain Tuesday by an Israeli assassination squad that struck into the heart of Beirut.

There were chants of "with blood we will revenge you" and a pledge by religious leaders that "we will carry the torch of the Palestinian revolution even into heaven." The sounds of rifle fire, a traditional Arab form of mourning sounded from the rooftops.

There were massive anti-Israeli demonstrations with anti-American overtones in Damascus, Kuwait and Cairo.

Witnesses estimated the crowds lining the route to the cemetery numbered upwards of 50,000. The turnout of mourners was considerably short of Beirut press predictions, some of which ranged as high as 200,000. They had expected the demonstrations to be greater than those that came upon the death of Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser in 1970.

Guerrillas in cars and Land Rovers cut a wedge through the sea of people lining the three-mile route to the cemetery. A guerrilla band,

Goods Hoarded

TOKYO (Reuter) — Six of Japan's biggest trading companies were accused in parliament Wednesday of hoarding basic commodities and using their immense wealth to make huge profits through speculation.

Representatives of Mitsubishi, Mitsui, C. Itoh, Sumitomo, Marubeni and Nissho Iwai were questioned throughout the day by opposition members of a lower-house committee investigating price rises.

A trade ministry report last week accused the six companies of making huge profits from speculative trading in stocks, land, wool, cotton, silk, soybeans and timber.

Trade Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone warned the six the government would not tolerate such activities to the detriment of the people's welfare.

Several of the company presidents told their interrogators they are engaged in "self-reflection" about their activities and are drawing up criteria for future conduct of trading operations. But they denied hoarding to force up market prices.

New Breed of H-Addict Emerges

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Canada's almost-epidemic heroin problem now involves what the head of the federal health protection branch in Ottawa describes as a "different breed" of addict.

And the new breed of heroin addict is not only considerably younger and better educated than the stereotype "criminal heroin addict" of a few years ago, according to Dr. J. B. Morrison, assistant deputy health minister in charge of the HPD — the new addict seems, more importantly, to have lost "the fear of heroin."

Federal health authorities, as a result, are becoming increasingly concerned that the country's changing and rapidly-expanding heroin problem must be dealt with in a new and better way.

The latest heroin conviction statistics recently published by the bureau of dangerous drugs appears to support Morrison's comments. Heroin convictions during 1972 reached 923, up almost 85 per cent from the previous year's number. Alberta experienced the most significant jump, involving a 375 per cent increase compared to 1971, followed by similar large increases in Quebec and Saskatchewan.

B.C. remained the centre of the problem, with 63 per cent of the convictions, followed by Ontario with 17 per cent and Alberta with almost 15 per cent.

More important, perhaps, one-third of those convicted for heroin offences last year were between the ages of 21 and 24, according to the statistics. An additional 23 per cent were between 18 and 20 and another 19 per cent were between 25 and 29 years of age.

Morrison in an interview added that the statistics reveal that the new breed of young addicts tend to be multiple drug users, in contrast with the old-school addict who usually used only heroin.

In fact, there is considerable evidence that the young heroin users take heroin as a part of a much larger drug experimentation that involves "speed," cannabis and other hallucinogens such as LSD.

The bureau of dangerous drugs, in its latest statistics, estimates there are almost 9,000 "known" narcotic addicts in Canada, 86 per cent of them using principally heroin. This compares with the more realistic estimate, Morrison agrees, of the LeDain Commission that Canada has between 12,000 and 15,000 narcotic addicts.

Hockey: Roger Crozier —A Caper to Remember

I suppose there are two ways to describe what Buffalo coach Joe Crozier did to the Montreal Canadiens at the Forum on Tuesday night. And did so well.

Some might call it "bush", calling for a measurement of goalie Ken Dryden's pads with only seconds remaining in regulation time and the teams tied at 2-2. But to many others, it was clearly a case of one-upmanship, and Crozier won going away.

Let's analyze the facts briefly.

Earlier this year Montreal coach Scotty Bowman called Buffalo goalie Dave Dryden for having an oversized stick. Dryden got a penalty. Montreal held on for a victory in that game. Crozier vowed revenge.

Earlier in this series, Bowman went scurrying to National Hockey League referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison complaining about the manner in which Crozier had been making substitutions. Crozier called Bowman a cry-baby. But he was only sharpening the needle.

Tuesday the Sabres were hanging on late in the third period. The Habs had tied the score and were threatening to put the game away when Crozier acted. Any help he could give his team, a third-year expansion club, he would. And he was ready.

He called Dryden for having oversized pads (10" is the maximum width). He knew the rules, and that there would be a penalty to start overtime. The Sabres would have the extra man. The Habs might be upset. Bowman most certainly would be.

Clancy Had a Way With Him

It was strictly legal, and a caper well executed. Bowman had been upstaged, and was to be even more so when, in a counter-move, he asked for a measurement of goalie Roger Crozier's pads. "Can't do it until after the first overtime," ruled Morrison.

Crozier had just scored a magnificent double. Even if his team didn't score with the odd man, the tide had turned, and the Sabres were to win. And it just has to figure that Crozier's move, coming when it did, and the Habs outplaying the Sabres, probably saved the game, and besides, made history. For Bowman, it was an egg-on-his-face look.

There's more than one way to fire up a club, however, and the redoubtable King Clancy had few peers. Once when Toronto was matched against Boston in a two-game, total-goal playoff, the Bruins had won the first game, 3-0, and had scored early in the first period of the second game for a 4-0 series lead. Clancy wasn't too pleased and when big Charlie Conacher complained to him that Red Beattie of the Bruins had been giving him a bad time with his persistent checking, Clancy replied: "Why don't you belt him?"

Conacher complied with Clancy's advice and crashed an elbow into Beattie's face. Referee Odie Cleghorn ignored the infraction. A few minutes later, Clancy tripped Eddie Shore, the muscle of the Bruins. Shore screamed: "Trip, Odie, I was tripped." Cleghorn ignored the plea. Clancy prodded Shore "He's robbing you."

Buck Turned Out the Lights

Shortly thereafter, Toronto's Red Horner deflected a shot into the goal from the goalmouth area, and Boston claimed Horner was in the crease illegally. Clancy continued to badger Shore about the incompetence of the official.

Shore finally blew, and fired the puck at Cleghorn, hitting the referee in the posterior. "You're gone," said Cleghorn. Infuriated, Shore threw the puck into the crowd. "That will be 10 minutes more," intoned the official.

Suffice to add the Leafs scored three goals while shore was off, won the game, 8-3, and the series, 8-6. Conacher got three goals, but the real hero was Clancy.

Hockey fans here will likely recall a different play used by Maple Leaf manager Buck Houle. Portland coach Hal Laycoe used to have his team go for a skate about 40 minutes before game time, and in one playoff game, Houle figured he might have a plan to upset the Buckaroos, and perhaps Laycoe.

So when the Bucks took to the ice, there were no lights on overhead. Players skated in near darkness. Laycoe was furious. He charged to the Maple Leaf office only to be informed that Houle would be back "in about 20 minutes", and nothing could be done about the lights until he returned. Yes, later, the Leafs won, although Houle was advised by league HQ never to do it again.

Still, that was only child's play compared to the thought and planning that went into that incident at Montreal on Tuesday.

Crozier's Caper was delightful indeed and also why the Canadiens crumbled.

Goalie 'Beyond Reproach'

GLENN HALL
. . . it isn't so

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Wednesday he is convinced that former NHL goalie Glenn Hall never was involved in gambling on NHL games.

"I have no doubt whatsoever that Glenn Hall's conduct during his 16 seasons in the league is beyond reproach," said Campbell in a statement.

Meanwhile, Hall said in Edmonton he hopes to have an investigation of charges that a Chicago Black Hawks goalie bet against his team in an NHL game in 1961. He did not specify what type of investigation he wants.

Hall, in the NHL from 1954 to 1971, played with Chicago for 10 years, from 1957 to 1967.

Theodore Aboud, a former bookmaker now serving time for fraud, testified Tuesday at the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime that a lot of money was won in bets on an NHL game in 1961 after a Chicago goaltender bet on New York Rangers, the opposing team.

"I don't know whether the goalie had fixed the game but it looks that way," Aboud said.

Aboud in his testimony did not mention the name of the goalie he referred to. But Hall said the inquiry witness could only have been referring to him since he was Chicago's regular goalie and played all 70 games in 1960-61 and 1961-62.

Campbell said he could not believe the charge against Hall.

"Throughout his lengthy career, Glenn's reputation for absolute integrity among his fellow players, executives and hosts of fans is so well established by his personal conduct that it is impossible to give any credence to the undocumented charge that was made about him at the inquiry."

"People that I know, know that I didn't bet," Hall said, adding he has been in contact with his lawyer and was "trying to place phone calls to the right people."

MONTREAL EXPOS were thrown a curve this week when nearly six inches of snow fell on Jarry Park, where National League team is to open it's baseball season Friday. Crusader Goalie Tough in Clutch

By UPI INTERNATIONAL

The Philadelphia Blazers have learned first-hand why Gerry Cheevers is called a money goaltender.

Cheevers turned in a fourth straight superb effort in goal Wednesday night as the Cleveland Crusaders whipped the Blazers 6-2 to sweep their first-round best-of-seven World Hockey Association playoff series.

Cheevers, who helped the Boston Bruins to a Stanley Cup title in the National Hockey League last season, allowed only six goals in the Crusaders' four-game sweep of Philadelphia.

Six players scored for the Crusaders, who will meet the winner of the New England-Ottawa series.

Philadelphia's Danny Lawson, who led the WHA this season with 63 goals, didn't score once during the playoffs.

"Now I know what everybody means when they say the hot goalie was in the playoffs," Lawson said. "This is the first time I've played against a guy like that. It seems that we had the best shots but Cheevers was always there and it was discouraging."

Cheevers said he didn't care whether his team faced New England or Ottawa in the semifinals.

In other playoff action Wednesday night, the Winnipeg Jets beat the Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 in overtime to take a 3-1 lead in their series and the Los Angeles Sharks beat the Houston Aeros 3-2 to go ahead in that series, 2-1.

Norm Beaudin scored the winning goal at 3:12 of a sudden-death overtime period to give Winnipeg its victory over the Fighting Saints.

With 45 seconds left in regular time, Bill Sutherland of the Jets recorded his second playoff goal to tie the score, 2-2.

End of Bernie Say Blazers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The owner and president of Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association said Wednesday they were through with goalie Bernie Parent.

Owner Bernie Brown and President Dick Olson made the comment at a news conference minutes after their team was eliminated from the playoffs.

The Blazers were swept out in four straight games by Cleveland Crusaders. Cleveland applied the crusher Wednesday night 6-2.

Parent tried to renegotiate his contract during the playoffs and walked out after one game of the best-of-seven quarter-final against Cleveland.

Brown and Olson also cast aside rumors the team would be moved to Miami, Seattle, New Orleans, San Diego, or Toronto.

Olson said of the Parent case that the goalie's lawyer exercised an option to declare the player's contract voided, although all the provisions had been lived up to.

He said there was an irrevocable letter of credit for $600,000 in the bank to secure the five-year, $750,000 pact signed with Parent. He said the goalie had been compensated this season according to a deferred payment plan of Parent's choosing.

Phil Watson, the team's director of personnel, related a story of Parent's surprise when notified that his agent had voided the contract. Watson said Parent wanted to continue in the playoffs and remain in Philadelphia.

Olson contended that Parent's lawyer tried to hold a gun to the Blazer executive's head, using the playoffs to get a renegotiated contract.

"He (the attorney) didn't think I'd call his bluff. I take the blame for this team not making it through the playoffs. It was a matter of principle and I'd do it again."

The Blazers' executives said the team would operate in Philadelphia next season, but might play its games at the 16,600-seat Spectrum, home of Philadelphia Flyers of the rival National Hockey League.

They said talks already had started with the owners of the Spectrum, who include Ed Snider, chairman of the board of the Flyers. The Blazers played at the 9,200-seat Civic Center this season.

Horton Called Key To Buffalo Success

BUFFALO (CP) — George (Punch) Imlach, general manager of Buffalo Sabres, describes Tim Horton as a 43-year-old defenceman with a 30-year-old body.

And Imlach subscribes to the theory that the five-foot, 10-inch, 180-pound Horton is one reason the Sabres will entertain Montreal Canadiens here tonight in the sixth game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final round instead of watching other National Hockey League playoff games.

While the now-famed French Connection of centre Gilbert Perreault, left-winger Richard Martin and Rene Robert, along with the superb goaltending of veteran Roger Crozier have been widely acclaimed, the work of Horton on the Buffalo blueline has remained effective, if at times unnoticed.

He turned in a strong performance in Montreal Tuesday night as the Sabres handed the Canadiens their second straight setback of the series as Buffalo won a 3-2 decision on Robert's overtime goal.

The Sabres are hoping for a similar display from Horton tonight, when the two teams clash here in the sixth game with the Canadiens leading 3-2 in the series.

Tonight's game will be televised nationally by the CBC beginning at 5 p.m. PST.

Horton was one of half-a-dozen players given a rest Wednesday by Buffalo coach Joe Crozier. Other absentees from the workout held at a suburban rink were defencemen Larry Hillman and Tracy Pratt, forwards Don Luce and Craig Ramsay, and netminder Crozier.

Coach Crozier held a free-skating workout for the players to iron out the kinks from the lengthy Tuesday night game. He then worked individually with rookie defenceman Jim Schoenfeld, right-winger Larry Mickey and the Perreault line.

Crozier refused to discuss Tuesday night's victory and said he wanted his players to concentrate on tonight's game.

Meanwhile the Canadiens arrived here late Wednesday night without left-winger Marc Tardif and with defenceman Guy Lapointe on the limp.

Tardif required eight stitches to close a cut on his left eyelid after being struck by the stick of team-mate Rejean Houle. Houle was body-checked heavily by Horton in Tuesday's game and in the crash his stick caught Tardif in the eye.

Lapointe suffered an injury to his right knee as he blocked a Martin slapshot during the overtime period of the same contest.

He will skate today pending a decision on his availability for tonight's game.

Without Tardif and Lapointe — if the latter is unable to play— Montreal coach Scotty Bowman could dress rookies Steve Shutt and Larry Robinson as their replacements.

Neither Shutt nor Robinson has dressed for any of the five previous games.

Flyer Coach Likes Where He Stands

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Coach Fred Shero isn't positive that his Philadelphia Flyers are finally going to advance past the National Hockey League quarterfinals, but he speaks like a man who has assessed the situation and likes where he stands.

The Flyers lead the Minnesota North Stars 3-2 in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup series. The sixth and possibly final game begins here at 9 p.m. PST tonight.

"The North Stars have to come to us now," Shero said. "We can go into their rink and be more aggressive. We can press 'em a little harder in their end.

"They're the ones who have to be cautious now and the longer the game goes, the more they'll have to open up."

Philadelphia has bowed out in three previous attempts to get by the NHL quarter-finals, twice to St. Louis and once to Chicago. Minnesota has won twice and lost twice in the quarter-finals, but never has gone past the semi-finals.

This year, the word was that the Flyers' aggressive play would be costly in a close-checking playoff against the experienced North Stars.

Minnesota took 1-0 and 2-1 leads in the series, but the youthful Flyers came back with a 3-0 victory at Minnesota and a 3-2 overtime triumph Tuesday in Philadelphia.

En route to its advantage, the Flyers have defied an NHL tradition that a team cannot afford to be short-handed in the critical playoff atmosphere.

Tuesday, the Flyers dared Minnesota seven times to score with a man advantage. Minnesota never did. In fact, the North Stars have tallied on only two of 33 power play situations in the five games.

Minnesota had held Philadelphia's power play, the most prolific in the NHL, to one goal in 17 tries until Tuesday. Then Rick MacLeish scored twice on power plays to give the Flyers their first two goals in the game, which has won eventually by Gary Dornhoefer's overtime tally.

GUIDOLIN ON WAY OUT

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins had barely skated off the ice after they were knocked out of Stanley Cup competition by New York Rangers Tuesday night when rumors started circulating that coach Bep Guidolin would not be back next year.

According to Canadian reporters, John Ferguson, a former winger with the Canadiens, may soon be leaving Montreal to coach the Bruins.

CANADA ENTERS TEAM

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The United States and Canada will send teams to the world junior hockey championship at Prague, Czechoslovakia, next December.

Former Cougars Shine in U.S.

Ron Grahame, who played goal for Victoria Cougars in the 1967-68 and 1968-69 hockey seasons, has been named to the All-American college team.

A standout in Victoria both seasons, Grahame accepted a hockey scholarship to the University of Denver in the fall of 1969 and reached his peak in his senior year.

Grahame was named the most valuable player in the Western Conference and was picked to the all-star team after leading Denver Pioneers to the conference title. The Denver club was edged in the NCAA final 3-2 by Wisconsin, the conference runner-up.

Two other former Cougar players, Doug Gibson and Alex Shibicky, as well as a player Cougars once owned but couldn't sign, also helped spur Denver to an outstanding season.

The unsigned Cougar, defenceman Bruce Affleck of Penticton, was selected to the conference all-star team in his freshman year.

Former Saint Joins Bombers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers have announced the signing of veteran flanker Bob Larose and rookie running back Virgil Robinson to their Western Football Conference club.

Robinson, six feet, 198 pounds, was a second round draft choice of the Green Bay Packers in 1971 after attending Grambling University. He was traded to New Orleans Saints that year, then returned to school.

Bull-Fight Set For Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Bullfighting will make its debut here when a three-day event opens at the forum May 18.

The spectacle will be under the direction of Alfredo Ovelha of Lisbon, Portugal, who has had 30 years experience in bull-fighting. Eighteen bulls will be brought in from Portugal for the event.

It's Off to School For Golfing Girls

In a bid to promote interest among young girls, the Vancouver Island Division of the Canadian Ladies Golf Association has arranged a three-day golf school.

The clinic, open to all girls 18 years or younger as of Aug. 31, 1973, will be held April 24-26 at Douglas Golfland.

Included for the $10 it costs to join will be golf instruction, talks on handicapping and rules, etiquette and sportsmanship and lunch each day. Officials will arrange billeting for out-of-town students if they require it, and golf clubs will be available if needed.

Pro Laurie Carroll will head staff giving instruction at Douglas Golfland each day between 9 and 11 a.m. After lunch and talks at Playland Curling Club each day, the young golfers return to Golfland for another two hours of instruction and competition.

The golfers will be divided into three groups, low and medium handicappers, those with higher handicaps who have some playing experience, and those with no handicap and beginners.

On the last afternoon, the golf students will watch an exhibition match at Gorge Vale between Carroll and city women's champion Dale Shaw.

It is not necessary to be a club member in order to attend the school. Further details may be obtained by calling Mrs. J. L. Campbell at 592-4150 or Esther Barnes at 592-2959.

Winds of Change to Hit Canucks—Hall

VANCOUVER (CP) — There will be no change in the day-to-day operation of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League despite the conviction of club president Tom Scallen on charges of theft of $3 million and issuing a false prospectus, a club director said Wednesday.

"The running of the hockey club was going to be changed anyway," said Coleman E. Hall, in an interview from Hawaii.

Asked to elaborate, Mr. Hall said there were "other considerations besides the right of first refusal" attached to a $1.5-million loan Scallen recently obtained from the Bank of British Columbia.

The loan, verified during the B.C. Supreme Court trail of Scallen and club vice-president Lyman Walters, was guaranteed by Hall, fellow director Cyrus McLean and Vancouver lawyer Arthur Fouks.

Scallen was found guilty on the two charges Tuesday, while Walters, charged with issuing a false prospectus, was acquitted by the jury on direction from Mr. Justice Harry McKay.

The court had been told the three men each put up $900,000 to guarantee the loan and had been granted the right of first refusal in the event the club was sold.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said in an interview from Montreal that if the conviction stands, "Scallen will have to resign as a governor" of the league.

But he said Scallen can remain as the team's principal owner.

Mr. Hall said he was working closely with other staff in hiring a new general manager to replace Bud Poile, who resigned last month for medical reasons.
